Governors Agree
Three Good Prayers
One Plain Threat
Mr. Barsotti's Gift

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1923, by Star Co.

The President asked all Governors of coal mining States to reopen mines, using the State power, with a guarantee of national support to prevent interference by striking workmen.

Only one Governor says that the President has no right to coerce the strikers. The others agree to co-operate with him. If the Governors of the coal States understand public opinion, that opinion is in favor of forcible arbitration where public necessities are concerned. Public opinion, however, is not all-powerful against a closely organized, determined minority.

The Rev. Dr. Stetson, head of New York's Trinity Church, looking down on Wall Street, is worried and writes three special prayers to get the United States out of its troubles.

One prayer is for the President and all in authority.

One prayer is for social justice and the third "for our country." These prayers are good and wise, because they don't take sides. They just say "please take care of us." The main idea is that we should be thankful in prosperity, and not let our trust in the Lord fail in BAD times.

A more definite, one-sided statement comes from Lewis, head of the striking miners. He says in substance: "If you use force against the miners, they will not protect mine property. Every man will go out, the mines will be flooded, and neither the President nor anybody else will be able to get coal out of them."

Meanwhile, coal yards are nearly empty, the situation is described as "panicky" and we are buying tons of thousands of tons at high prices from England.

Before America was discovered, by an Italian, Dante wrote about the mountain that makes it impossible for those that live in Pisa to see Lucca. Today's news would surprise Ubaldino Peruzzi, a man from the Province of Lucca, Carlo Barsotti, proprietor of the Italian newspaper "Il Progresso Italo-Americano" of New York, now gives five million lire, to cut a tunnel under the mountain and unite Lucca and Pisa, cutting in half the railroad distance between them. At Pisa, more interesting than anything modern, still stands the leaning tower from which Galileo dropped the great and the small weight, both striking the ground at once, overthrowing Aristotle's teaching, believed for nineteen hundred years, that heavy weights fell more rapidly than light weights.

Mr. Byrne, twenty-five years old, arrived in America, unable to read or write, and couldn't get in. His sister dropped her work as a shirt waist maker, and in six weeks had taught her brother to read and write. She got him into the United States. He is working now and going to night school.

Nobody knows how much sisters have done for their brothers. Brothers especially fail to realize it. In childhood the sisters civilize the brothers with their gentler natures. They take care of younger brothers and sisters. And in later life they are often the main inspiration and help of their brothers —the sisters of Herschel and Renan for instance.

Different parts of the world suggest different laws. Brazil would compel all newspaper writers of editorials to sign their names. What good would that do?

A British member of Parliament proposes an amendment to the criminal law punishing girls for putting up their hair before they are sixteen.

DOROTHY BRADFORD IS HIT BY COLLIER

Panic on Excursion Boat Is Averted by Crew; Injured Rushed Back to City

A score of passengers on the steamer Dorothy Bradford, excursioning to Provincetown, were injured today when the vessel was rammed in a dense fog off Castle Island by the coal collier Arlington, Boston-bound from Maryland.

The impact threw passengers into confused heaps, one woman being thrown down a flight of stairs, and another aged woman jolted out of her seat on deck.

Instantly confusion reigned, in which the screeching of whistles mingled with the screams of frightened women. While there was no panic, there was a general stampede, which was quickly quieted by members of the Bradford's crew.

The vessel, struck a glancing blow on its starboard side, was quickly turned about by the commander, Captain L. J. Sargent, and speeded back to Rowe's Wharf. There the passengers were hurried ashore and the more seriously injured rushed to the Massachusetts General Hospital in ambulances.

NURSE IS HEROINE.

The hero and heroine of the accident were from Cambridge. Dr. Thomas H. Henton of No. 315 Broadway, Cambridge, caring for the injured, assisted by Mary J. Hall, superintendent of the Cambridge Training School for Nurses.

Miss Hall's conduct was lauded by members of the crew and passengers. She cared for the slightly injured while the doctor looked after those more seriously hurt.

Several sustained dislocated arms and limbs.

At Massachusetts General Hospital officials refused to divulge the names of patients taken there.

But from Dr. Henton was secured the list of those he attended, five of whom he said were taken to the Boston hospital.

Here is the official report of Captain Sargent, made to company officials the moment the steamer docked back at the wharf:

"Left wharf at 9:40. Opposite Governor's Island ran into dense fog. Slowed down, then stopped. Suddenly heard whistle of Arlington dead ahead.

"Replied to whistle and rang for full speed astern." Were backing when suddenly rammed. Port bow of Arlington struck us glancing blow on our starboard bow. Vessel not seriously damaged. Was confusion among passengers and much screaming, but they immediately quieted down and under the circumstances their behavior was excellent."

The Bradford, following the dispatching of the injured and the treatment of the slightly hurt by the Cambridge doctor who, with his wife, had the heroine nurse aboard as a guest, turned about and left for Provincetown, many of the passengers remaining aboard.

There were 428 passengers aboard the Bradford when the vessel left for the trip to the Cape.

How badly the collier Arlington is damaged could not be learned.

She is understood to be riding the waves at the scene of the collision.

Tugs were hurriedly dispatched to bring her to port.

The Arlington was entering Boston

WILL IMPROVE MALL ALONG COMMON

Mayor Curley today approved the appropriation of $2,800 for further improvements of Lafayette Mall, between Boylston street and Park. The Mayor has awarded the drafting of plans for the new Thomas Gardner School in the Brighton district to J. A. Schweinfurth. The school will cost $175,000.

Mayor Curley has granted permission to Chief John O. Taber of the fire department to attend the fire chiefs convention in San Francisco during August. At the same time he agreed to let Deputy Park Commissioner William Long represent the city at the annual meeting of park directors in Minneapolis August 19-20.

GOES FOR FUGITIVE HELD IN CHECK CASE

Special Officer Stephen J. Gillis, of the Dudley street station, left today for New York to bring back Samuel Lotow, formerly of Roxbury, charged with passing worthless checks. The police, who have been trying to find Lotow for some time, finally located him in California, where he had just served a sentence in San Quentin Jail.

CURLEYS GUESTS OF HUB ELKS TONIGHT

Mayor and Mrs. Curley have been invited to a dinner tendered to a delegation of the New Orleans Lodge of Elks, at Paragon Park, Nantasket Beach, tonight, by Boston Lodge. They have accepted. The delegation is on its way home from the Atlantic City convention and is stopping over in Boston for today and tomorrow.

REBUKE AND FINE FOR STAR

Assessed $25 in Auto Case and Stirs the Judge to Severe Comment

Gloucester, July 21.—Rita Stanwood Warner, beautiful wife of Henry B. Warner, wealthy actor, on the stage famous as "Jimmy Valentine," giggled in district court today as she sat in the prisoner's docket with moonshine drunks, sneak thieves and other members of that strata of society found in police circles.

Beautifully gowned, in a short-skirted Summer suit, with a black lace veil trickling down her tanned face, her black eyes continually lit up with merriment as members of the "Four Million" made famous by O. Henry, the man who wrote "Jimmy Valentine," tripped to the bar.

Then the scene changed and it was the actress herself on the witness stand, where she was severely rebuked by Judge York and fined for violations of the traffic and automobile laws for which she had been arrested.

HUSBAND PAYS FINE.

Her appearance in court followed trouble with Traffic Officer Joseph Wilson, which has been buzzed over in the fashionable Bass Rock colony where the Warners have a beautiful Summer home, for the past week.

The officer she charged with rough conduct and discourtesy.

He arrested her for parking her automobile in a no-parking street and driving without a license.

After fining her $25 Judge York, turning to the beautiful young woman, who has become famous in motion pictures, said:

"Madam, you ask me if I believe the officer's word instead of your's? Most emphatically I do. Your whole attitude in this court room, which I could not help observing, has not been a very good recommendation for you. You have been sitting here giggling and laughing and you have certainly not impressed me very favorably."

A moment later, almost crying with rage, Mrs. Warner strode out of the courtroom to her automobile while her husband paid the fine.

THREATENED POLICEMAN.

Mrs. Warner's introduction to the troubles of today came last Saturday when she objected to Patrolman Wilson tagging the automobile she sat in, which stood in Pleasant street, a business thoroughfare where parking is not allowed.

"Officer, what are you doing?" she said when the patrolman approached the car.

"Tagging your machine for parking here," said Wilson.

"Don't you dare," screamed the woman, according to evidence today, becoming hysterical. "Don't you dare."

The machine was tagged and then Mrs. Warner sped to police headquarters, where she interviewed

POISONED GIRL VOWS REVENGE

Victim Says She'll Expose the Men Who Staged Orgy in the Back Bay

Raving in delirium at the Peter Brent Brigham Hospital, "Alice Cadeaux" keeps reiterating one phrase:

"I'll get the men who are responsible for my being here. Oh, Lord, let me live so I can expose them!"

Hospital authorities say that the blonde, blue-eyed woman will live. If she does, what is the story she will expose?

Thus far her accounts have been vague and contradictory.

A naval officer, strolling in the Fenway, in a lonely stretch off Charlesgate East, today came upon the girl, who seemed dazed and suffering from the effects of poison.

Commander C. H. Husted, U. S. N., commandeered a passing automobile and took the woman to the hospital.

Turning a deaf ear to all inquiries, at first she would reveal nothing. Then she said her name was Alice Cadeaux, and that her family lived in Malden.

ATTENDED WILD PARTY.

She said she was to be married on August 2, and for that reason she didn't care to speak about the origin of her predicament.

Later Special Officer Lowney of the Back Bay police, questioning her, noticed that she wore a wedding ring. He mentioned that to her. She admitted she had been married before, and said:

"My name is not Alice Cadeaux. That's only for the records. I was mixed up in a party in the Back Bay. It was a wild affair. There were several men and lots of booze. I'm not going to say anything about what happened—not now. I became sick and I don't remember what happened after that. The next thing I knew I was here.

WANTS TO GET EVEN.

"I hope I get better. I want to get even with those men."

She declined to give any details of the alleged orgy, or where it had taken place.

The woman was apparently in a bad condition physically. The physicians attending her were unable to determine the nature of the poison from which she was suffering. They intimated that it might be home-brew booze.

Following her talk with Lowney she refused to say anything more, or to talk with a priest who came from the Mission Church to see if he could help her in any way.

She is described as being about thirty years old, slender, medium weight, blonde hair, blue eyes and a retrousse nose.

There were no marks of identification on her person.

Doomed Pair Enjoy Dinner Party Before Going to Chair

Ossining, N. Y., July 21.—Saito Taiao, twenty-three, a Japanese, convicted of the murder of Mitaro Yasa Hara in New York in February, was the dinner guest of Peter Nunziata, nineteen, convicted of the murder of Professor Wilfred Kotov in Woodhaven, Jan., before they were both electrocuted in Sing Sing prison.

Regardless of what may be ordered, the last meal of condemned prisoners always is provided at the expense of the State. Nunziata, however, said he wanted to pay for his own meal, and insisted also on "treating" his death partner to a spread.

Both ate steak, French fried potatoes and coffee. Then they had ice cream and cigars.

They spent their last hour in prayer.

CRIPPLED VET BEAT WIFE; 3 MONTHS

The fact that John Eskew, a colored World War veteran of Willard place, Roxbury, is handicapped by crutches did not prevent him from beating up his wife Beatrice, who testified in Roxbury court that her belligerent war hero beat and maltreated her on many occasions. The last encounter took place last Sunday, when, it is alleged, he threw her against a sink. John was sentenced to three months in the House of Correction to cool his ardor. He did not appeal.

CHILD FRIGHTENED TO DEATH IN BUFFALO

Buffalo, July 21.—As a result of disorders growing out of the railway shopmen's strike here, a child has been frightened to death. He was the six-year-old son of Mrs. Josephine Hulbert of Forks, a suburb of Buffalo. The child was in the mother's arms as she lifted a curtain to look out on an approaching mob. Just then a brick was hurled through the window of her house. The child went at once into hysteria from which it is said he never recovered.

CHARGE HE ATTACKED LANDLORD WITH AXE

Pawtucket, July 21.—Enraged over what he termed "profiteering" led Joseph Zarenlovitis of Central Falls to attack John Michael, his landlord, with a hatchet, according to the story told in District Court.

Zarenlovitis was bound over to the Grand Jury.

CLAIMS OF UNIONS UPHELD

Governor Discounts Reports of Railroad Disorders in Massachusetts

Governor Channing H. Cox today denied reports of disorder attendant to the railroad strike in Massachusetts.

He substantiated, in effect, charges by union leaders that such reports were propaganda to align the public against the strikers.

Governor Cox said:

"There have been no disorders and no reports of disorders in this State except the alleged shooting at Deerfield. That had nothing to do with the strike.

That John Rago, the Boston & Maine strike-breaker, was accidentally shot by a disabled war veteran rather than by any disorderly strikers was officially reported to Governor Cox today by Colonel Alfred F. Foote, State Commissioner of Public Safety. Samuel M. Shurtliffe, a shell-shocked veteran, was shooting at woodchuck across the pond from where Rago and five other strike-breakers were in swimming at East Deerfield. His view was obscured by a heavy tree growth. The carrying distance of Shurtliff's rifle and the flesh wound received by Rago indicated that the shot came from the veteran's gun, Foote said. Shurtliffe, who is neither a trades unionist nor a Boston & Maine employe, was sincerely sorry for the accident, Foote said.

TROOPS IN READINESS.

"Mr. Hustis of the Boston & Maine conferred with me yesterday because of his concern over what had happened in Concord, N. H. I got no reports of disorder from him or from anybody else. There has been no request made for the use of State troops.

"It happens that 3,500 men are in camp at Devens. The engineers are at Hanover and the cavalry at Boxford. They are certainly in readiness. It merely happens that they are on their annual tours of duty.

"There have been no interruptions of train service on any of the roads in this State. The State Board of Arbitration has offered its services.

Maine R. R. Strikers Face Eviction

Derby, Me., July 21.—Fifty striking railroad shopmen of the Bangor & Aroostook railroad shops have been served with writs which threaten them with loss of their homes.

The complainant is the Bangor Investment Company, which claims title to the houses occupied by the affected tenants. Occupants of the houses in question say they are the property of the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad. They assert they have not paid any rent or do not know of the Bangor Investment Company.

Those on whom writs were served have been instructed to appear before the Piscataquis Municipal Court at Dover, Wednesday, for a hearing on the writs.

If the legal proceedings are successful, the evicted tenants may have to leave for another section of the State, as there is only one vacant house in the village.

Attorneys for the tenants say they will petition Governor Baxter for an issue of army tents to shelter strikers and their families, numbering about two hundred.

New Hampshire Troops on Rail Strike Duty

National Guardsmen with loaded rifles patrolled the Boston & Maine Railroad yards and shops in Concord, N. H., today, and special police details were on duty at all yards in Worcester, as a result of the spread of violent outbreaks in connection with New England's railroad strike.

In New Haven, Ct., the railroad operators moved along a new line when they secured a temporary injunction in the United States courts, prohibiting union officials or members from interferingin any way with the activities of the railroad.

More than 200 soldiers, comprising the strength of Battery C and D of the New Hampshire National Guard, were ordered to duty in Concord by Governor Brown, after Mayor Henry E. Chamberlain had represented to the Governor that he feared the city authorities would be unable to handle the situation.

These two companies, from Laconia and Portsmouth, respectively, are from the 197th regiment, Coast Artillery. The men are armed with rifles, while each company is supplied with a machine gun and a number of automatic rifles.

SALESMAN ARRESTED.

At Laconia, N. H., William Palmer, a Roxbury traveling salesman, was arrested for making seditious remarks. He was charged with saying that he hoped a troop train bearing New Hampshire National Guardsmen would be dynamited and the soldiers "blown to hell."

Sam Speidale, an East Deerfield strike-breaker, was hailed into court and fined $100 for carrying a loaded revolver, after complaint been made to the police by strike pickets, who pleaded that he had carried the gun.

The temporary injunction was issued by Judge Edwin S. Webster in the Federal Court. Hearing on the permanent injunction will be had on July 29.

Meanwhile the strikers in Concord are indignant at the calling out of the troops. The outbreak that led up to this, which involved the attack on strikebreakers' sleeping quarters Tuesday night by a group of masked men, was denounced by the strikers as a "frame-up," and characterised as "an attempt to blacken the shopmen in the eyes of the public." No strikers had any part in this trouble, it was stated.

In calling the guard, New Hampshire officials were careful to take troops only from cities where there are no strikes now in progress. Neither Laconia nor Portsmouth has any labor difficulties at present.

Calling of State troops to duty was condemned today in a statement signed by President H. F. Hunneyman, Vice-President S. Nelson Smith and Secretary W. J. Langley of the Concord Federated Railroad Shop Crafts. The statement says:

CRITICIZE MAYOR.

"The Mayor of our city, in defiance of the city government and influenced by the Boston & Maine officials and a few of the leading men of Concord, used his authority by calling on the governor for State troops, ignoring the city marshal and officers of the federated crafts, who promised that the situation could be ably handled without outside assistance.

"Up to date there has been no damage to property and no serious disturbances to necessitate calling of State troops.

"The federated crafts, as citizens and taxpayers of the city of Concord, go on record as opposed to calling State troops, an unnecessary expense to the public.

"If the city government or city marshal of Concord see fit to call on the members of the federated crafts for police duty, they have the full co-operation of this body."

STEAMER IN COLLISION

STEAMSHIP DOROTHY BRADFORD.

While en route to Provincetown today this big excursion boat rammed into a collier off Castle Island. A number of persons were injured. The steamship was but slightly damaged and later sailed on its trip to the Cape.

Several striking shopmen, on the Concord police rolls as special officers, were called for duty, responded and went out as guards and patrolmen Thursday evening.

Three Shot in Buffalo Yards

By Associated Press.

Buffalo, July 21.—Two boys and a woman were shot when two railroad detectives fired on a mob of 500 persons in the Erie yards here. The boys, eleven and seventeen years old, will die, surgeons say. The woman was slightly injured by a stray bullet which passed through the door of her home.

News of the shooting of the two boys spread rapidly through the district and when police reserves arrived they found a crowd of 3,000 besieging a shanty in which the two railroad detectives were being guarded by two policemen. Threats of lynching were made by the crowd. The police reserves finally got them to a place of safety, but only by free use of their clubs.

Harding Hears Conference Was a Failure

Washington, July 21. (By the Associated Press).—President Harding was advised today by Chairman Cummins and Senators Watson of Indiana and Kellogg of Minnesota, of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee of the unavailing efforts made by them in conference with several leading Eastern railroad executives last night to obtain a basis for settlement of the railroad strike.

The three interstate Commerce Committee members went to the White House shortly after 9 o'clock and laid before the President the full details of the conference last night at a Washington hotel with the railroad executives. They declined to discuss their report prior to its presentation to the President. The railroad executives in their conference were understood to have declared emphatically that there could be no restoration of the seniority right of those employes on strike.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, in a statement issued today, invited the government to urge that the striking coal miners and the striking railroad workers and their respective employers inaugurate direct negotiations.

"Labor asks for conference with the employers," Mr. Gompers said. "If the government wishes results, if it wishes operation of mines and railroads, let it adopt the only course that can secure those results. Let it exert its tremendous influence to bring the employers into conference with the representatives of the workers."

Searchlights Installed in Springfield Yards

Springfield, July 21.—Searchlights have been installed at the local Boston & Maine shops and yards, and will be put into operation tonight, it was announced today by Division Superintendent C. M. Woodward, who said that the step was taken to minimize likelihood of violence growing out of the shop strike. He said that practically every worker in the shops has been threatened by strikers and that in addition their families had been warned to have the men quit their jobs. He said further that several men have been attacked.

Yesterday when a group of strikers entered the premises by means of a gate that had been disused for years, steps were taken to close all entrances to the yards. Superintendent Woodward said it was found impossible to get evidence to prosecute for threats of violence owing to the disinclination of the men threatened to testify.

Walter Rutherford, spokesman for the striking shop workers here, entered emphatic denial to the statements of Superintendent Woodward regarding violence or threats and ascribed the protective steps taken as due to timidity.

Wife Elopes Third Time, Husband Forgives Her

Providence, July 21.—Some folks might call Giuseppe a genuine Christian, some a fool.

He has forgiven his wife three times for infidelity and would do so a fourth time if necessary.

Giuseppe, whose other name is DiFabbio, from New Rochelle, was in district court where his wife was arraigned for having eloped for the third time with a former boarder at her New Rochelle home.

"Do you wish to prosecute your wife?" asked the court.

"Prosecute her?" cried the astounded man. "Why, sir, I wish to forgive her and take her home to her children."

He was allowed to do so.

BOUGHT GINGER ALE; FRAMED A RAID

Did George Williams of Cambridge sell whiskey to John Kozlowsky?

This most question came up today before Commissioner Hayes.

It appears that John owned a place in which liquors were sold. He sold the place to George. Recently, he said, he went into the place and asked George to sell him some whiskey. He paid 25 cents and got a drink of—ginger ale.

On cross-examination he admitted that he wanted the place raided and that it was for this purpose that he secured a search warrant.

George was discharged. Assistant United States Attorney White stated that John should be prosecuted for perjury, and that he might institute such prosecution.

CONLON GUILTY OF MIREPRESENTATION

A jury in the Superior Criminal Court, before Judge Dubuque, returned a verdict of guilty against James Conlon of Cambridge, who was charged with having obtained from James D. Arbeeam and his wife, Ina A. Arbeeam, a deed of real estate in Amesbury in exchange for a note for $5,000 made by Lewis T. McKenney and secured by a first mortgage on land in Wakefield. It was claimed that Conlon represented to Arbeeam that the Wakefield property had on incumbrances other than the mortgage note for $5,000, but the evidence presented to the jury showed several other liens.

ARMY OFFICER RAPS BEACH TRAIN DRUNKS

Brigadier-General M. L. Hersey, commanding the coast artillery forces in this area, has complained to the superintendent of Pemberton-Nantasket railroad the against the conduct of drunken passengers on the trains Saturday nights. He declares they are a nuisance, and says his complaint voices the sentiments of many others who patronize the road. He charges the disorderly passengers are particularly offensive to women, and urges the road to eliminate the pest.

Man Ends Life When Bride Leaves Him

By Associated Press.

Bellmore, N. Y., July 21.—A month ago William Mohrman's sweetheart arrived from Germany and two weeks later they were married. The bride took a dislike to her mother-in-law and to living in the country and begged Mohrman, a baker, to move to New York city. But he refused to budge. The bride left him, saying she would not return. Today Mohrman committed suicide by hanging himself in his barn.

TO REPEAT AIR TRIP OVER OCEAN

London, July 21 (By the Associated Press).—The Portuguese aviators, Captains Sacadura Cantinho, who recently completed a transatlantic flight from Lisbon to Brazil, are proposing to repeat this feat, and have ordered a triple motor Savois seaplane capable of flying 3,000 miles without landing, says a dispatch to the Times today from Rome. The machine is expected to be ready by January. There will also be an Italian attempt, says the dispatch, to fly from Rome to Rio Janiero and Buenos Aires next February.

ASKS $10,000 TO FIX CHARLESBANK

For the improvement of the Charlesbank Gymnasium, Mayor Curley will send to the city council on Monday next an order asking for an appropriation of $10,000. This famous old spot has turned out more athletes than any gymnasium in the city and during the past few years has gone by default. Space for tennis courts will be made as well as for other games. The athletic field will be put in first class order.

TOWN SUES SURETY FIRM FOR $100,000

Suit for $100,000 has been brought by the town of Stanfield against the American Surety Company of New York for the failure of Frank W. Barnard, tax collector of Mansfield, for when the company had advanced bonds totaling $80,000, to properly perform his duties of office. The suit was filed today in Suffolk Superior Court. The bonds were given in 1918-19 by the company.

$592,000 FOR STONEY BROOK RESERVATION

Mayor Curley today received an estimate from Public Works Commissioner Joseph A. Rourke that it will take $592,000 to complete the will mean expenditures for sewerage, improvements and conduits. About $200,000 will be placed at the commissioner's disposal each year unt l the completion of the work.

BICYCLE SKIDS, AUTO KILLS BOY

Hyman Carl, fifteen-year-old son of Samuel Carl, No. 463 Belmont street, Belmont, was killed instantly today when he was struck by a five-ton truck driven by Harry Pleuner of Watertown. The accident occurred at Trapelo road. The boy was ridin gon a bicycle and was thrown directly in the path of the truck when his wheels caught in the trolley track.

PRIORITY ORDER PLAN IN COAL SHORTAGE

Washington, July 21.—The Interstate Commerce Commission today rushed its plans to establish priority orders to insure fuel shipments to the far Northwest and to other parts of the country in greatest need of coal. The commission's plans are so far-reaching they may take on the same aspect as wartime preparations.

The government has not yet reached the point of developing a system of rationing coal among consumers. A schema for equitable distribution, through railroad priorities, officials said, probably will care for the needs of the country for the time being. Officials, however, are now convinced there will be a coal shortage next Winter whatever the outcome of the coal strike.

Troops Man Mines Around Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 21.—Western Pennsylvania coal operators, independent and associated, today privately set about to reopen their bituminous mines and produce coal. Plans for starting the various operations were developed in secret because of fear of possible trouble if the plans were prematurely made public.

Troop F, 104th Cavalry, National Guard, left Punxsutawney early today for an undisclosed destination unofficially reported to be Cokeville, Westmoreland County. Troop A, also of the 104th Cavalry, left Connellsville under sealed orders. Their destination was reported to be Ebensburg, Cambria County.

Mount Carmel, Pa., July 21.—Responding to the call of a bugle, more than 500 members of the United Mine Workers gathered at the Richards colliery, a Susquehanna Coal ieries Company operating near here, at 4 o'clock this morning and prevented pumpmen, engineers and firemen from resuming their duties.

Shortly afterwards a mob of nearly 400 men appeared at the Green Ridge operation and chased the engineers, firemen and pumpmen home. Seven State troopers were on hand and prevented disorder.

Coal Company Asks for U. S. Troops in Ohio

Columbus, Ohio, July 21.—Declaring that local officials are unable to cope with the situation and that "Governor Davis has refused to furnish us any protection," the Consolidated Coal and Coke Company of Butler, Pa., through its attorneys here, today telegraphed President Harding asking that Federal troops be sent to guard the company's operations near New Straitsville, Perry county, Ohio.

WORCESTER WOMAN SEEKS ELECTION

Another woman stepped into the political race for the Massachusetts House of Representatives today when Amanda L. Peterson of Worcester filed papers for the Republican nomination from the Thirteenth Worcester Representative District. Other women candidates for the House are Katherine L. Dowling of Roxbury and Margaret A. Gallagher of the South End.

GYPSY QUEEN DIES AMONG THE ROVERS

Toledo, O., July 21.—Mrs. Hoph a Lovell, seventy, once known from coast to coast as queen of the gypsies, is dead in a tiny picturesque cottage here, while encamped beside in tents, especially pitched, are more than a hundred former members of her gypsy band. The funeral began to arrive early in the week when it became known that the former queen had only a few days to live.

MOVIE QUEEN FINED $25

Chief Willard J. Whidden. Wilson entered as they sat talking.

"Get out of here," screamed the actress. "Get out of here. I'm going to take off your clothes."

Wilson testified to the threat in court and said he left the station house to avoid trouble.

REBUKED BY JUDGE.

On Tuesday when the officer saw the actress driving with a State inspector from the automobile licensing bureau, he investigated and learned she had no license to drive a machine, although given one by the inspector three minutes before the officer reached the car. A bail warrant was then issued, charging her with driving without a license.

On the stand today, her face twitching between a giggle and a smirk, the beautiful actress denied having threatened Patrolman Wilson in the presence of his chief.

"But he insulted me and made me hysterical," she cried pointing to Wilson who stood by.

"I believe everything the officer said of you," said Judge York, whereupon he censured the young woman and fined her.

JEWS TO PRESS MYSTERY BODY INVESTIGATION

The last line of the story of "Grave 2, Section 1," is not yet written. Though the government has ceased its investigation, the congregation of Anshei Lebovits will continue its probe of the grave of mystery.

A special meeting of the five members of the Anshei Lebovits congregation is to be held shortly to determine what action the Jewish congregation will take in regard to the mysterious new evidence developed at the second exhumation of "Grave 2, Section 1," in their cemetery at East Woburn.

This announcemen. was made by Attorney Samuel Miller, counsel for the congregation, today.

"We are determined to clear the good name of our cemetery," declared Attorney Miller, "and the matter is not yet concluded, as far as we are concerned."

WILL CONTINUE PROBE.

Attorney Miller intimated that the members of his congregation are determined to keep the matter alive until they learn whether an old coffin was placed in the grave of mystery to throw the investigators off, as indicated by the evidences in the case.

Five members of a special committee of the congregation appointed to investigate the grave of mystery declared to newspaper men as they watched the reopening of the grave yesterday that the old coffin containing the skull of a man was not the one they saw on June 1.

On that date the coffin they saw was at a depth of 8½ feet and was a new white pine coffin, bloodstained and covered with eight pieces of medicinal gauze. The new mystery coffin was but three feet below ground.

NEW COFFIN A "BLIND."

This conflict in the evidence developed at the two openings of the grave of mystery has stirred the Jewish congregation in the West End intensely, and the five members of the congregation have given their attention to see the matter through.

In their theory of substitution of the old coffin as a "blind," they are corroborated by Chief of the Woburn Police Charles McCauley and by young Max Kreliker, son of the deceased caretaker, who took the secret of the grave of mystery with him to his own resting place.

LARGE COMMISSIONS PAID TO SALESMAN

A commission of 60 per cent, was paid to the salesmen who sold stock in the Bertacchini Bonellery Wheel and Company, Amos Bertacchini of Somerville, the chief salesman, said this afternoon when he was called to the witness stand on the first instalment paid by the person who bought the stock. He got 10 of the 60 per cent. Bertacchini was the principal witness at today's hearing before the State Department of Public Utilities, where the company is charged with fraudulent stock-selling. The last hearing wound up in a fist fight between a salesman and an enraged buyer.

POLICE AT FUNERAL OF LATE COMRADE

Policemen from Station No. 18, Hyde Park, and members from Hyde Park Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and the Royal Arcanum, were among those who attended funeral services today for Patrolman George H. CLIP COUPONS FOR BEACH OUTINGS

"I'm so glad we're going to have another excursion to Nantasket," said the gray haired old lady, who appeared at one of the stations in the Boston American for excursion information.

She was one of the hundreds who flocked to the stations to cash in their coupons and obtain tickets for the Boston American's Mothers and Childrens' Excursions to Nantasket. They will start next Monday from Rowe's wharf.

CLIP THE COUPONS.

Tired and worn from her hard day's work the tears came to the kind old lady's eyes as she thanked the Boston American for its interest in the mothers and children. "If someone didn't think of us once in a while there would be thousands who would never get an outing.

Are you one of the lucky ones who have already clipped the three coupons from the paper? If not, start now. Clip the coupon appearing in another section of today's paper. Then clip one tomorrow and Monday and you are entitled to one boat ticket to Nantasket and return after you turn in the coupons with 10 cents to one of the distributing stations named in the advertisement.

For every child that accompanies a mother, a set of three coupons, consecutively dated, must be turned in, with ten cents.

FREE BATH LOCKERS.

The Boston American announces an added attraction for next week's outing. Luff & Larkin, proprietors of the Sagamore Bath House on Nantasket avenue, Nantasket Beach, have offered the use of their lockers free of charge to the mothers and children who attend the American's outing.

This with the understanding that the youngsters and their mothers will furnish their own bathing suits and towels. If they cannot obtain the necessary articles will be furnished the bathers by the management of the bath house at a nominal fee. Just enough to cover the cost of the work done on the suits and lockers will be charged against the excursionists.

The officials of the Nantasket Steamboat Company will see that extra attendants are on duty throughout the big excursion boats. They will keep the youngsters from getting hurt on the trip down the harbor.

Get your coupons from the Boston American, cash them in for the boat ticket, and get aboard the steamer at Rowe's Wharf on either Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday or Friday of next week.

In Paris the French Academy of Medicine proposes a fight against cocaine. Some countries have passed laws manufacturing the deadly habit-forming drug and pedling it in other countries.

Specific co-operation does wonders. American scientists working with the Near East Relief have distributed two million doses of cholera vaccine, checking an epidemic of the plague that threatened to be even more deadly than the Turks.

Laws are passed and repealed. Strikes are called and ended. Platforms are written, it all means little.

But science goes ahead steadily, never goes backward, injures nobody except occasionally the most deeply superstitious and ignorant. When we become used to the idea of the greatest temples of the world not to be the temples of science, and the greatest monuments erected in honor of the great scientists.

Important!

FIRST: Each person, child or adult, must have an individual ticket.

SECOND: Tickets will not be good for children over 12 years of age or for male adults unless accompanied by children.

THIRD: No adult can accompany more than three (3) children.

FOURTH: Positively no coupons will be redeemed at the wharf.

Here is the coupon for the Boston American's trips to Nantasket and return for the mothers and children of Boston.

OLD ORCHARD POLICE OPEN WAR ON BATHING SUIT PARADERS

LAUNCH PURITY DRIVE

Men and Women Bathers Must Wear Robes or They'll Be Landed in Court

Old Orchard, Me., July 21.—War has been declared by members of the Old Orchard police department on men and women bathers who insist on parading the streets in their bathing suits.

If the practice is kept up, some of the offenders are going to be brought into court, according to a statement by members of the department today.

Persons leaving the beach in their bathing suits will be compelled to don coats or robes that properly cover the bather and, furthermore, will be compelled to button the garment.

Heretofore many have donned a coat carelessly over their shoulders, but have made no apparent effort to cover their suits, the police say.

"Union avenue is the worst place in town, but even on Old Orchard avenue, the heart of the business district, men and women parade the streets in scanty attire and even the few who put on robes leave them open to trail in the breeze,' said Patrolman Fowler.

"We are constantly notifying the offenders to be more careful, and if the practice continues, some of them are going to be brought into court."

NEBRASKA ELECTION DOUBTFUL; BRYAN IN

Omaha, Neb., July 21 (By the Associated Press).—Adam McMullen of Beatrice today led Charles H. Randall of Randolph by 300 votes with fewer than 100 precincts missing in the only doubtful contest from Tuesday's State-wide primary election for the Republican gubernatorial nomination. The general opinion was that an official tabulation would be necessary to determine the winner. Charles W. Bryan, brother of William Jennings Bryan, won over Dan B. Butler in the Democratic gubernatorial race.

BROCKTON COUPLE HIT BY NEW YORK TAXI

New York, July 21.—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Flagg of No. 183 Main street, Brockton, Mass., are confined in the Bellevue Hospital with painful injuries as a result of being struck by a taxi while walking along Thirty-third street, near the Pennsylvania station. Thomas Fryor, driver of the car, is said by bystanders to have sped out of the driveway and crashed into them, continuing without slackening his speed. He was overtaken and placed under arrest. Mr. and Mrs. Flagg will recover.

In Damage Suit

ACCUSED AND ACCUSER.
Dorothy Clark Elms, Brooklins film star, above, has been advised that her $200,000 damage suit against her former admirer, Herbert Rawlinson, below, on charge of attack, will go on trial in Los Angeles court on January 23 next.

TO TRY GIRL'S SUIT AGAINST RAWLINSON

The $200,000 damage suit brought against Herbert Rawlinson, film star, by Dorothy Clark Elms of Brookline is scheduled to go on trial in the Los Angeles courts on January 23 next, according to advices from that city today. Judge Willes of Los Angeles set the date for trial.

Mrs. Ethel Clark of Brookline, mother of the girl, states in the suit that Mr. Rawlinson attacked Dorothy on October 15, 1920, when the girl was only fifteen years old.

When the mother's charges were made public, Mrs. Elms was in Lewiston, Me., conducting a dancing school. She denied the charges and then married Carl Elms. She admitted later that all the charges were true.

According to the girl's statement, Rawlinson attacked her when she was fifteen years old. "He ruined my life," the girl stated. "Ever since I was ten years old Herbert Rawlinson waited for me to grow up. He even promised to marry me as soon as he could secure a divorce from his wife, Roberta Arnold."

47 DRUGGISTS PUNISHED BY DRY CHIEF

Swinging his dry net Prohibition Director Elmer C. Potter found within its meshes forty-seven Massachusetts druggists in the year ending July 1, he announced today.

The majority of these druggists are in Boston.

Thirty of them have been deprived of their Federal permits to sell booze on prescriptions.

Seventeen more are under Potter's ban, and he has asked Washington to take away their permits.

In all cases revocation is for a full year. There is no appeal from the government revocation.

BOARD ALSO ACTS.

In addition, it was announced by Fred W. Archer, chairman of the State Board of Pharmacy, that within the past year eighteen druggists have been deprived of their licenses by the board. Most of these cases were based on proved violations of the State law governing sale of liquor by druggists.

Boston druggists charge that the zeal of the enforcement officers should be directed against physicians who make out prescriptions for booze rather than druggists who fill the prescriptions.

William Brookas of Melvin & Badger, leading Boston druggists, said:

"If we have one or a hundred prescriptions which appear to be genuine, we have no recourse but to fill them.

"If there is anything about a prescription that looks suspicious, we naturally refuse to fill it. Occasionally prescriptions brought to us are made out to another drug store.

POSITION OF DRUGGISTS.

"After we have declined to honor such prescriptions it sometimes happens that the customer goes out of the store, scratches out the name of the original druggist and writes in the name of our store. When we catch him in that, we refuse to fill it."

Another druggist explained that whether or not the proprietor of a drug store wished to handle liquor prescriptions, he was compelled to do so or suffer a loss of business in drugs.

IDEAL WEATHER WILL RULE OVER WEEK-END

"Weather ideal for week-enders," says the weather man, for the first time he has dared make such an assertion for many weeks. Whether or not the weathermen is banking his prophecy on St. Swithin could not be learned. At any rate, we are going to have a sunny week-end with not too high summer temps. Fair and moderate winds will prevail.

All sections of the country were cool today. Helena, Montana, was the coolest spot with a temperature of fifty-two degrees; Key West, Florida, the hottest with eighty-two. Boston was the warmest place in New England with seventy-two.

UPTON SINCLAIR IS A CANDIDATE

San Francisco, July 21.—Filings of candidates for the California primary in August closed today. The time limit expired last night. Among the thousand petitions was that of Upton Sinclair of Pasadena, author who filed for United States Senator on the Socialist ticket, adding his name to the Dope of Senator Hiram W. Johnson and Charles C. Moore, Republicans, and William J. Person, Democrat.

STRIKE-BREAKERS ON STRIKE IN PAWTUCKET

Pawtucket, July 21.—The strike-breakers have gone on strike.

Two hundred and fifty men employed as strike-breakers in the Brunnel mills walked out when the company sent new fire trucks and guards which have been used to convey them to and from their work.

It is said that 250 men are en route from New York to replace the striking strike-breakers.

WHITE CHILD WITH GYPSIES STIRS CROWD

A band of gypsies was chased through Roxbury streets by a crowd who believed that a white child in the gypsy band had been kidnaped. Police finally managed to drive off the pursuers. The gypsies proved to police that the white child was really the offspring of one of the gypsies by producing a birth certificate and credentials from the police of twenty cities.

NORTHCLIFFE SUITS ARE WITHDRAWN

CLAIM POISON KILLED AGED COUPLE

New York, July 21.—The trial of Albert J. Bradicich, a vermin exterminator, for second degree manslaughter in connection with the deaths last April of Fremont M. Jackson and his wife, of Lawrence, Mass., at the Hotel Margaret Annex, Columbia Heights, Brooklyn, has settled down to a battle of medical and chemical experts.

Mr. Jackson, a wealthy, retired carpet manufacturer of 78, and Mrs. Jackson, 58, had been married about a year. Both had been married before and Mrs. Jackson had two sons by a former marriage, Winfield P. Warren of Lawrence, and Russell Doten Warren, who disappeared in Chicago in 1916.

The Jacksons, according to their relatives and friends, seemed extremely happy and were in good health. On April 25 they were planning a card party for the following Saturday. The next day they were found dead in the bath room of their apartment.

Discovery that servants' quarters in the basement, immediately under the Jackson apartment, had been fumigated to destroy insects on the day the Jacksons died, led to exhumation of the bodies and to the indictment of Bradicich and Eli Dupuy, manager of the hotel.

The prosecution scored heavily in the opening session of the trial.

Seven experts on poisons, on chemicals and on medicine sat around the witness table in the county court in Brooklyn.

Over the strenuous objections of counsel for the defense, the prosecution got into the record the testimony of Dr. William W. Hale, who assisted in the autopsy on Mr. Jackson's body, that he had detected the odor of hydro-cyanic acid or cyanogen gas after the chest cavity had been opened. His testimony that he had remarked to Dr. Charles Wuest, Kings County medical examiner, who was performing the autopsy, also permitting to stand.

REV. WILLIAM O'BRIEN, LOWELL PASTOR, DIES

Lowell, July 21.—Rt. Rev. Mgr. William O'Brien, permanent rector of St. Patrick's Church, died at the parochial residence following a short illness.

Rev. Wm. O'Brien

Rev. Fr. O'Brien was born in Ballna, Ireland in 1851, and was educated with the Diocesan College of Killaive and All Hallows College, Dublin. He was ordained June 25, 1875. He was immediately appointed curate in St. Patrick's Church.

When the St. Michael's Parish was established in the Centreville district, he was made pastor, and on the death of Rev. Michael O'Brien of St. Patrick's, was appointed rector. Father O'Brien was chaplain of the Hibernian divisions of Lowell.

ARREST WOMEN IN DISORDER AT MILL

Lawrence, July 21.—A minor disturbance at the lower Pacific Mill today, where about 300 pickets had gathered, resulted in several arrests. Rosalie Malia was fined $10 following her arrest on the charge of assaulting two women workers entering the mill. Altheda Dallaire was arrested for assaulting another woman worker, but her case was continued until tomorrow. Jack Veola, a loyal mill worker, was arrested during the disturbance. A pointed piece of metal was found in his possession, which he said he carried to protect himself. His case was also continued.

NO IMPROVEMENTS AT SPECTACLE ISLAND

Mayor Curley today disapproved the request for $80,000 to make improvements on the buildings at Spectacle Island in connection with the disposal of the city garbage. Following a report of the committee investigating conditions on the island, there will be a substitution of the manner in which the garbage is being disposed of, in the near future.

SLEEP POWDER KILLS MOTHER OF SEVEN

Montclair, N. J., July 21.—Mrs. George F. Morrison, wife of the vice-president of the General Electric Company, died at her home here from an overdose of a sleep-inducing powder which she had taken to quiet her nerves. Seven children survive.

Flapper Yanks Tooth of Kid; He Only Wanted Hair Cut

R-R-READY? LET'R'GO!

Dr. Harry C. Lanergan let me mind his tooth shop at Newton yesterday while he went to the ball game. It was hard on the customers, but at that it hurt me more'n it did them.

By THE FLAPPER

"Alla ogga oog."

"Yes," I said, brightly, "if the sun will only stay out. Now steady—"

"On ara oog."

"You don't say! Now, jus' a minute. This may hurt a little—"

The patient, in his enthusiasm, had almost risen out of the chair. I pushed him back with my knee and yanked his tooth.

"Wogga wogga oog," he said, piteously.

PULLS WRONG TOOTH.

"Of course it hurts," I said, soothingly, "but it's almost over. One more yank—"

"Wow!"

"Now." I said, taking the rubber dam offa the patient's mouth, "what was it you were saying!"

"I was saying," he informed me in a hurt voice, "that you had the wrong tooth."

"Oh, that's all right," I told him. "I don't mind pulling another one. Jus' lean back—I'll get the right one if I hafta pull every one in your head."

But my patient seemed to be in a touchy mood, and he walked out on me, muttering to himself.

POLISHES UP AXES.

I was polishing up the grinders, chisels, mallets and axes when a little boy came blubbering in.

"Wha's a matter, sonny?"

"Aw yaw yaw," he bellered.

"Nev' mind, I'll fix it," I told him. "Up in the chair you go."

I found a more or less loose tooth in the urchin's face and pulled it out. When I got through he was yowling louder than ever.

"Mah-mah, mah-MAH," he hollered.

A stout, determined looking woman burst into the office at this point and grabbed the loud kid outa the chair.

SENT FOR HAIR CUT.

"Bertram," she cried, "mama's looked everywhere for you. My poor little child. I sent him ahead to have his hair cut," she explained to me. "He must've thought you were the barber. Poor little dear, he hates having his hair cut."

Bertram and I both realized we'd made a mistake so we both shut up.

My next customer was a flippity flap, who breezed in like a sea-plane.

"This the tooth-office?" she asked, airily.

"Yup," I said. "Have a chair. Now what is it? Want a hollow tooth stuffed?"

"No Do Jandiro, accompanied by five companions. The naval officers also plan to go a thousand miles up the Amazon in a flight to break the record. They intend to cover more than eight thousand miles on their trip.

"No," she said. "I only came up for a shine."

"Then out you go," I told her. "I'm not apt to make another mistake today. I'm no boot-black. See!"

DOLLING UP LIKE PARADE

"I'm talking about my teeth," said the flap, haughtily. "I'm dolling up like a parade for a big party I got on f'r tonight an' I wanta get my gold tooth polished up. Do you follow me, dumb-dent?

"And," she said, as I got out the tools. "Have a care with it. As they say in the losta found's it's valued f'r sentimental reasons."

"How come?"

"It's a gift from my goof," returned the flap. "He asked me which I'd rather have, a gold ring or a gold tooth. First I was gonna take the ring."

"Why didn't you?" I said. "It woulda been more romantic."

"I know," she said. "But look. If this egg got mad at me he could always get a ring back. But a tooth, not so easy. Shine 'em up!"

ARMY OFFICER KILLED AT MINEOLA

Mineola, N. Y., July 21.—The accidental killing of First Lieutenant John P. Roullot, an army aviator, on the pistol range at Mitchel Field yesterday, was announced today by army authorities. Lieutenant Roullot, it was stated, was killed by a pistol shot fired by Lieutenant Robert Purcell, who is taking a course of instruction in the Reserve Officers' Camp here.

PLAN WEEK-END GERMAN HOLIDAYS

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND.
Boston American Staff Correspondent.
Special Cable.

Berlin, July 21.—Week-end holidays, the custom in England, will become a law in Germany.

With compulsory invalid, sick and accident insurance largely borne by employers already in force and with liberal municipal and State support for the unemployed, of whom there are at present but few, the forthcoming legalisation of week-end holidays as provided in the labor law, is another move in the direction of making Germany a paradise for the workingman.

Many industries now have a 46-hour week or less, while shop councils determine who may or who may not be discharged.

Those in favor of legal week-end holidays have advanced the theory that they are a big factor in health for the working classes, adds to their joy of life, increases their capacity for work and gives great impetus to athletics.

Harding's Picture Is Worth More Than Wilson's

By Associated Press.

Staunton, Va., July 21.—Although former President Wilson was born in Staunton, residents of this city yesterday placed a higher auction value on an autographed picture of his successor in the White House, whose birthplace was in Ohio.

President Harding's picture brought $46, against $26 for that of Mr. Wilson. A baseball bearing the autograph of Rogers Hornsby of the St. Louis Nationals, who is leading both leagues in home runs, was bid up to $24 before a local fan bought it in.

DEER ISLAND HAS FIRST TWILIGHT GAME

The first twilight baseball game ever played by any penal institution nine in the country was played at Deer Island. The prisoners were hard at the national game at 5:30 p. m. when Institution Commissioner David J. Johnson had to call it.

So successful was the experiment that baseball games will be a regular feature at the island for the remainder of the Summer season.

BANK BANDIT CAUGHT WITH $3,000 IN AUTO

IRISH REGULARS CRUSH REBELS IN BATTLE

Dublin, July 21.—Free State troops forced an entrance into Waterford today, capturing fifty irregulars and a number of rebel strongholds.

The Waterford Postoffice Building and a number of strategically important hotels are in the hands of the regulars and the capture of the entire city by regulars is imminent.

There was violent fighting at Waterford before the Free Staters breached the rebel lines and penetrated the city. Artillery on the heights flanking the River Suir kept up a heavy bombardment of the city for forty-eight hours.

As the rebels retired they mined and set fire to many buildings. While the southern push of the Free Staters continues the chief seats of action were Waterford and Limerick.

Artillery has been active at Limerick, but today the fighting had died down to sniping and skirmishing.

The irregulars still hold several strongholds at Limerick. At Roscrea eleven irregulars were captured while attempting to ambush Free State troops.

A number of persons are reported to have been killed and wounded by the explosion of a land mine in County Waterford.

PROVINCE STREET PLAN 10 YEARS OLD

Mayor Curley today answered statements of the Finance Commission, that the proposed line of Province street, was three months ago, and not at present, by digging up a plan which had been in existence for the past ten years, and which shows the original plan of street widening. The plans were submitted to the Mayor by Neal J. Holland principal assessor, who drafted them more ten years ago. The proposal at that time was to have a fifty-foot street, starting from Hanover street, opposite Portland, through to Bradlee square, Franklin avenue, City Hall avenue, Province street, Music Hall place, Winter place, across Temple place, to Mason street, to Head place to Boylston street.

LAWHORN'S RELEASE ORDERED BY NAVY

Orders from the Navy Department at Washington were received at the Charlestown Navy Yard today by Colonel A. T. Marix, of the Marine Corps, for the release from custody of Private John D. Lawhorn of the Marine Corps, who was arrested by the Middlesex County Grand Jury of the murder of Ralph G. Brewster, station agent at Winchester. Lawhorn has been held in custody at the local yard since last May. At the time of his arrest he was on a practice tour with a rifle team at Quantico, Va. He will be restored to active duty at once.

TO SEIZE MICHIGAN MINES NEXT WEEK

Lansing, Mich., July 21.—Governor Groesbeck plans to seize the Michigan coal mines Monday afternoon, it was learned today. He asked T. Leo Jones, president of the miners, to meet him in Saginaw at 1 o'clock Monday afternoon to confer on miners returning to mines under State operation.

MARILYNN STARTS WEST TODAY TO MARRY JACK PICKFORD

GIVEN BIG GREETING AT SHOW

"Follies" Co-Workers and Public Seem to Approve Wedding, Says Miss Miller

By MARILYNN MILLER

Star of "Sally" as told to Bert Ford of the Boston American staff in her apartments in Hotel Ambassador, New York City, and approved by her.

"I received a flattering welcome home at the 'Follies' Monday night. It was my first appearance in public since my return from Boston. Will Rogers spied me sitting with friends in the orchestra, way down front. He said, 'I see by the papers that Marilynn Miller is going to be married.'

"The audience applauded. Then he said, 'And, by the way, there's our Marilynn herself sitting right there. That brought more applause.

"'And I see by the papers also,' added Will, 'that Jack Pickford is the lucky fellow—the groom-to-be.' Mention of Jack's name with mine brought down the house. Apparently the audience did not look at it like Flo Ziegfeld and Billie Burke.

PUBLIC LOVES A LOVER.

"That ovation given Jack and me was a pretty good index of public opinion, it seemed to me. It made it appear that Jack and I had the public on our side in the debate.

"I thought it rather daring of Will Rogers to pull those lines under Ziegfeld's roof. I cheered me ever so much. I have been showered with letters and telegrams of congratulations since reaching New York. The keynote of all the letters and messages is that I should marry the man of my choice in spite of the protests of my manager or anybody else and there are heaps and heaps of good wishes and blessings.

"I have received letters from persons in every walk of life. They showed that the people are with Jack and me. The mass of correspondence has been very comforting, a contrast to the attitude of my manager and his wife.

"And I answer every letter. I have made that a rule ever since I became old enough to attract attention. My maid acts as censor. She destroys all anonymous notes and letters, but every one that is signed is answered by me.

"Would you believe it that the majority of my fans are school boys and girls. I have scores of admirers among girls from twelve to sixteen. The letters written by boys are killing. They come in waves. I'll get thirty or forty from a boarding school which I happen to be playing near. I receive many requests for autographed photos and I comply with ever so many. Sent out 700 odd autographed photographs during my seven weeks' engagement in Boston. Quite an item, but also a pleasure.

"My friends and sympathizers seem like a gigantic family. It is pleasant to go to the altar with such and avalanche of blessings. Jack appreciates it, too.

WEAKNESS FOR HATS.

"Yes, my trousseau is ready. See those stacks of hats. What will I ever do with them all! I've got a weakness for hats. Hats are a hobby and I've bought ever so many new ones for my wedding. Describe my wedding gown? Oh, just say that it's made of chiffon, a simple white affair. I tried it on Monday. Looks nice. And Carrie Wallace, a colored dressmaker, made it.

"I've got gowns by Frances and imported gowns, but I wanted my wedding gown made by the girl who has done my sewing for fifteen years and she has produced a masterpiece of needle craft and simplicity. It's lovely. Everyone who has seen it says so.

"Yes, everything is ready now and mostly all packed. I've been scanning the newspapers watching developments in the railroad strike. I feared that it might get serious just as I was about to start West. Wouldn't that be a predicament, though? It wouldn't stop me from being on deck on August 1. If trains stopped I'd simply leave all my trunks behind, bundle up my tulle veils and orange blossoms and hire an aeroplane.

"I'm impatient to start. Counting the hours now. Sister Claire and I will leave New York at 5 p. m. today. We shall stop over in Chicago to be joined by my mother. We intend to leave the train at a way station some distance from Los Angeles and motor to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks at Beverly Hills.

QUIET WEDDING.

"The ceremony will be performed by an Episcopal minister. Only the members of both families and a few close friends will attend. The wedding factivities will be held in the Fairbanks home. And Ma Pickford has arranged for Jack and me to occupy her house at No. 1001 Lidran avenue, Los Angeles. We shall spend part of our honeymoon there and shall motor through California the balance of my vacation, which will be brief, as I must be back in Boston by September 1.

"Let me say as sort of a parting word that if this difference with Mr. Ziegfeld had been one involving business I would not have given a word for publication, but as he interfered with my private affairs I was forced to tell my side to the public. It has been very distasteful to have all this fuss develop at the end of a busy season and on the eve of our wedding, but Flo and Billie Burke and all other critics have my good will.

"This is Jack Pickford's undertaking and my undertaking. No others have legal or moral right to be concerned or to meddle.

THOMAS J. McDONOUGH

EARNED LESS THAN BANK INTEREST

Thomas J. McDonough of Lynn brought this $9-share Greene company certificate into the Boston American office. He said it represented a $420 investment that has earned him only about $17. Had he put the money in the bank he figures it would have earned about $36 in interest, he said, and he would have had the principal, too, instead of "wallpaper" equivalent.

60 SHAKEN UP IN "L" CAR CRASH

Miss Margaret Hourihan, eighteen years old, of No. 19 Warren street, Arlington, was injured, and more than sixty others were shaken up when the trailer of a Highland avenue Elevated car broke its coupling and dropped behind, only to gather speed on a down-grade and crash into the rear of the lead car.

The accident occurred at the western end of the Somerville Bridge.

Miss Hourihan was taken to her home, where she is being treated for severe cuts and bruises about the head.

EDITOR WHITE REFUSES TO REMOVE SIGN

Emporia, Kas., July 21 (By the Associated Press).—William Allen White, Kansas editor, awaited today service of a warrant for his arrest, directed by Governor Henry J. Allen, for alleged violation of the industrial Court anti-picketing law, which, he was informed last night, was in preparation by Attorney-General R. J. Hopkins.

Mr. White and Governor Allen are lifelong friends, and Mr. White has supported the Governor throughout his administration. Even in the face of the impending action against him he said: "There is no personal feeling between Governor Allen and me. He is making a splendid Governor."

Hearing of his impending arrest, Mr. White restated his defiance of the ruling of the court that to display signs in sympathy with the striking railroad shopmen was against the law. Mr. White said that he would not take down the sign which he had placed in the window of the office of his paper, the Emporia Gazette.

The sign reads:

"We are for the striking railway men 50 per cent. We are for a living wage and fair living conditions."

FLORIDA PIRATES SHOOT SKIPPER

Miami, Fla., July 21.—The converted auxiliary schooner William H. Albury was held up by motorboat pirates off Gun Key and her master, Captain Edgecombe, shot dead on deck, according to a wireless message from Bimini picked up by the Miami Beach radio station.

The message said the Albury was held up by men in a motorboat bearing the name Falcon and license number W-7456. No details of the holdup were given, but the Falcon escaped and the Albury headed for Bimini, where the body of the captain was taken off.

SICK DAUGHTER CAUSES FITZ TO RAP DRY LAW

Montreal, July 21.—"Even if a Canadian doctor prescribes ale I will be arrested if I attempt to carry it over the border.

"You can buy hard liquor on prescription in America but I cannot get ale as medicine for my daughter, who is suffering with tuberculosis at Saranac Lake."

These are the terse statements of ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald of Boston, who is here consulting a specialist about the condition of his daughter. At the same time he is observing the working of the liquor laws here for "fire" in his "anti-Volstead" campaign for the governorship of Massachusetts.

To reporters to whom he flayed the Volstead act as "penalising the sick." Fitzgerald declared that he had little hope that it would be repealed. He expressed confidence that it might be amended and "liberalized" if a fight is waged.

SLAIN SHERIFF'S SON TO AVENGE MURDER

Cliftonville, W. Va., July 21.—Fighting among the strikers and strikebreakers is quieting down since the son of Sheriff H. H. Duvall went in pursuit of the men guilty of murdering his father. Sheriff Duvall was killed during a running battle that lasted for nearly a day. The sheriff's son was immediately appointed Sheriff of Washington county and started after the slayers. State troopers are on duty in sections of the strike areas to prevent further rioting.

GREENE FIRM BROKE WORD TO INVESTOR

Speaking of Henry Vincent Greene, the former ice cream scooper and sundae-spreading soda jerker, there strolled into the office of the Boston American today a gentleman who would very much like to meet him.

He is Thomas F. McDonough, a Lynn shoe worker, living at No. 18 Belmont street, West Lynn. Back in '19, when Henry was riding the crest of an ocean of gold, Tom bought some stock in one of the H. V. Greene companies.

GOOD FOR WALL PAPER.

Tom had the stock with him today, two beautifully engraved documents representing 60 shares.

"It's very pretty," said Tom. "If I had enough of it I'd paper a room."

It set Mr. McDonough back $420, that stock, and to date it has earned him about $17. He bought it because Henry's agents said a man was "a sucker" to put money into a savings bank and let it earn only 4½ per cent. They promised much more.

"Well, said Tom genially, "if I had put it in the savings bank it would have earned me to date around $60, and I'd still have my principal. As it is, it looks as though I have a fine little envelope full of wallpaper."

Mr. McDonough is one of the 60,000 investors, on behalf of whom the various Greene companies have been sued for $14,000,000. Tom isn't sore, to use the language of the street. He wouldn't exactly hit Henry if he met him, but he would like to have a look at him. In fact, he went to the elaborate Greene offices, then at No. 25 Huntington avenue, for the express purpose of seeing the former "did you say vanilla, lady?" financier about a year ago. At that time Tom and his family were in want.

"In fact," said Tom, "I was actually hungry; my boots were sticking out of my shoes. I was on my uppers, plum up against it. So I went to see Greene.

"When I bought the stock I was told that at any time at all I could collect 85 per cent. on it. I wanted Greene to back up that promise, which was the strongest factor that impressed me in the selling argument of Greene's salesmen.

GOT FINE RAZZING.

"Well, I got a fine razzing. They slipped me up against that Scotland Yard Englishman you wrote about the other day. I guess he was hired to keep the suckers like myself calmed down.

"I told him I was pretty badly off, but that didn't worry him. He wouldn't do anything, just simply wouldn't make good, said it was impossible, so eventually I hit the air.

"But I'll always remember that office. It was the first office I was ever in in my life where so many clerks were busy doing nothing. I think Greene hired a lot of female marathon runners to hike back and forth in that place so callers would be impressed.

"I recall a poor little woman who was begging for money. She had bought stock and was crying to an office boy."

McDonough revealed the dark gentleman in the wood pile in the floating of Henry's stock. There were several jokers in Henry's game, but this one stands out.

"I bought six shares in the Commercial Finance Corporation," said Tom. "They cost me $70 a share, $420 in all. (The Commercial Company then was a subsidiary of Henry's parent corporation, the H. V. Greene Company.)

"I bought them from John Riley and George Horne, of Horne & Gardner, Lynn real estate firm. They were lodge brothers.

"Well, the minute I paid for those stocks I was told that while I could at any time get 85 per cent. of my money back I could not get 85 per cent. of $420, only of $300, the par value of the shares being $50 each, the other $20 per share being charges of the Greene Company for what they called service.

PROFIT OF $130 FOR GREENE.

"In other words, on my six shares of stock Henry Greene made $120 profit. Imagine it and me being dumb bell enough to fall for it." Tom smiled. "I guess I should have been stung."

Mr. McDonough laughed. "Did you see the greetings Greene published in the Lynn newspapers last year? You didn't. Say, that boy has humor. Here's what he put in the papers the day before Christmas:

TOLD WIFE TO LOCK UP HOUSE.

"'Wishing stockholders of the H. V. Greene Company a merry Christmas and a prosperous New Year.' It was signed by Greene," continued Tom. "After I read that word 'prosperous' I told my wife to lock up the house. I was afraid he was coming around for more money. But even that wasn't necessary. You couldn't sell my Missus stock in the United States mint. She's cured. So'm I."

GERALDINE AND TELLEGEN IN NEW ROW

New York, July 21.—A decision by Supreme Court Justice Donnelly today disclosed that Geraldine Farrar and her actor husband, Lou Tellegen, have a new disagreement which they are fighting out in the Supreme Court.

This time it is a dispute over money which Miss Farrar says she loaned her husband and failed to get back and which he asserts he paid. The money which Miss Farrar claims to have advanced in loans to her husband and for which she is suing him totals $9,600.

When Mr. Tellegen stated in his answer he had paid back all sums his wife loaned him and there was no indebtedness from him to her, she called his answer "vague and indefinite," and asked that he be compelled to file a bill of particulars stating when, where and by whom, as well as to whom, his alleged payments were made, and also revealing whether they were in cash or by check. The court overruled the application for a bill of particulars.

The other court actions which are still pending between Miss Farrar and her husband are her suits for divorce and his action for a separation.

Rumors of a reconciliation, which were recently denied by Mr. Tellegen and by Miss Farrar's friends, almost as soon as they became current, are still further shown to have been without foundation by the present suit.

GIRL OF 15 HELD AS SLAYER ON OWN STORY

Montgomery, Ala., July 21.—Mildred Willis Brewer, fifteen years old, granddaughter of former Congressman Willis Brewer, today is in the woman's ward of the county jail on a charge of first degree murder.

The girl drove up to the police station Thursday evening and declared she had killed Fortis McKeithen, thirty-six, husband of her cousin, seven miles from Montgomery.

Police made an investigation and found the body. They are skeptical of the girl's story, however, and lean to the theory that some older person conceived and committed the murder.

Letters McKeithen wrote the girl are expected to aid the police in solving the mystery in the case.

A negro chauffeur, employed by McKeithen, told a story which added color to the belief that another person fired the shot and that the girl is seeking to shield the real slayer.

The negro said he drove McKeithen to the point where he met Miss Brewer early Thursday morning and that later he heard a pistol shot.

Half an hour after, he said, the girl came to the car, remarked that "he's dead" and requested that she be brought to Montgomery.

The theory of the police is that if the girl had committed the crime she would not have remained with the body thirty minutes, but would have become hysterical and run toward the car at once.

When arrested the girl had a revolver, but it had not been discharged.

PHILLIPS SAYS LOVE CAUSED HIM TO HAVE 'CAVE WIFE' ARRESTED

CRITICISM UNJUST HE SAYS

Sent Her Away to Gain Time in Thinking the Matter Over Carefully

Los Angeles, July 21.—"I did it because I loved her."

Thus did A. L. Phillips justify himself in his own eyes today, when he was told there was considerable criticism of him, in notifying the authorities where his wife could be arrested for the brutal killing of Alberta Meadows.

"It has never occurred to me," said Phillips, "that anyone would misunderstand the reason I asked Sheriff Traeger to arrest Clara. It was so clear to me, after I had reasoned it out, that I suppose I thought it would be obvious to people in general.

"They don't understand," he continued. "Do they realize what it means when the person you love best in the world is in terrible trouble, and you have to decide what is best for you to do. In order to make this matter clear, I will have to go over all that I felt and thought—and did—after Calara left me at the station Thursday morning.

Then I'm sure they understand. I admit I didn't know what to do. Clara has implicit confidence in my judgment, and I knew she would follow my direction blindly, but I could not make up my mind what was the proper course to pursue. I had to find out what actually had happene. When she came home she was the craziest woman I've ever seen. My own mind was nearly unbalanced.

"And while I was gaining that time, I felt it would be best for her to go away. So I bought her a ticket to El Paso, knowing exactly where she was going and where I could reach her at any time. I had told her when we parted that I was always with her, no matter what the outcome and that she must rely on me and never doubt me.

"I consulted three friends and each one advised me to have her brought back. I had been told many times that Sheriff Traeger was a square man, so I went to him and asked him to bring her back. "I don't understand what people mean by saying I was wrong in doing this."

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, July 21.—Mrs. Phillips is believed to have purchased an automatic pistol two days before the young widow was beaten to death with a hammer, according to a story the Los Angeles Times published today.

The Times located a duplicate record of the sale of the pistol which police departments require all dealers in such articles to keep and found the salesman, John H. Raney, who said the woman who purchased the weapon seemed to resemble newspaper pictures of Mrs. Phillips.

The purchaser signed her name as "Mrs. A. L. Phillips." The initials are the same as those of the husband of the defendant in the Meadows murder.

The age given was twenty-seven years, differing from the statemen that she was twenty-three years old, made by Mrs. Phillips to jail officials when they wrote down a record of her arrival there.

Mrs. Phillips' husband was quoted by sheriff's deputies as having told them his wife, who was born in Texas, was an expert shot, and "could cut an apple in two with a six-shooter at several hundred feet." The pistol has not been located.

$20,000 LIQUOR CARGO SEIZED AT BEVERLY

Salem, July 21.—Liquor valued at $20,000 was seized on Hale street in Beverly Farms by police today and the two drivers of the trucks were arrested. They were Alfred Proventher of Peabody and Guy W. Cunningham of Beverly.

Police say they believed the cargo was being transported from a boat off West Beach. Revenue officers took charge of the burlap packages and cases of liquor and held it in the Salem Custom House.

BOGUS $20 BILLS ON 3 HELD IN WOBURN

The alertness and presence of mind of William S. Sullivan of No. 12 Flint street, Stoneham, saved a Woburn store-keeper from a $10 loss and brought about the arrest of three men who are said by police to be the New England agents of an extensive counterfeiting ring.

The men under arrest are Joseph Rapallo of No. 19 Cleveland street, Boston; his brother, Filippo, and Decino Francisco, both of No. 4 Chester avenue, Woburn.

They were arraigned in Woburn Court, today, waived examination, and held in $6,000 each until tomorrow.

SAW BAD BILL.

Sullivan, who is a driver for the Bleachery Fuel Company of Stoneham, had stopped in the store of David Pollock, No. 248 Main street, Woburn, to make a delivery, when he noticed Filippo making a purchase and offering a $20 bill in payment.

Because he makes collections of several hundred dollars weekly, Sullivan can detect bad money very readily. He remarked to Pollock that the bill looked like a counterfeit, and asked him to hold Filippo while the notified the police.

Pollock did so, and Sullivan shortly returned with Police Chief McCauley and Patrolman Kelley. They arrested Filippo and took him to headquarters, where they found the bill he had offered was spurious.

TWO OTHERS CAUGHT.

Sullivan then recalled that he had noticed two other men who had entered the store with Filippo, but who had left when the bill was questioned. The police started out to find them, and shortly afterward arrested Joseph Rapallo and Francisco. These two are said to have had more than $180 in bad bills on their persons.

The bills were in ten and twenty-dollar denominations, and were counterfeits of issues of the First National Bank of Ocean Park, N. Y., and the Grand Rapids National City Bank.

J. J. McGrath, a U. S. Secret Service agent, called at Woburn headquarters early this week. Chief McCauley said, and informed him that counterfeit bills were being passed there. McGrath is of the opinion that the trio arrested were getting the money from New York.

Because Miss Roche is always ready to play at benefit performances, and is known all over South Boston, she has a young army of friends out looking for the animal.

3 BADLY HURT IN HULL AUTO ACCIDENT

Leaving five persons lying in the street in Kenberma, where they had been knocked down by his machine, a reckless driver today "stepped on the gas" and disappeared.

Chief of Police Frank Reynolds, who was summoned, acted quickly. Somebody had caught a glimpse of the license number. It was 167,612 Massachusetts. Reynolds telephoned to towns ahead in the direction the machine had gone.

Three hours later a man giving the name of Chester H. Jordan was arrested. He said he lived at No. 353 Shrewsbury street, Worcester. He was taken to the Hingham Court for arraignment.

Three of the injured are at the Sturgis Hospital, Nantasket, with serious injuries.

They are Mrs. Ida Berman, Nantasket street, Kenberma; George B. Ward, No. 28 School street, Jamaica Plain, and William Gardner, No. 273 Brookline street, Cambridge.

A short time previous to the accident two intoxicated men staggered by the Berman Block in Kenberma. One fell and sustained a bad scalp wound. Mrs. Berman summoned the police ambulance and the man was taken to the hospital.

A group of about a dozen men and women stood around discussing the accident. Unnoticed, a limousine approached. Without warning, it plowed into the gathering. When it left five people were stretched out. Two were knocked over by those who were seriously hurt.

BANDITS BLOW PORTSMOUTH SAFE; GET $600

Portsmouth, N. H., July 21.—Burglars who raided three local offices and stores, blew open the safe in one place and obtained a sum of money and several checks.

At the office of the Texas Oil Company, on Market street, where the safe was blown, the force of the explosion broke all the windows and badly damaged the office furniture. The robbers got $200 in cash and $400 in checks. The job was done while a freight train was passing, which deadened the sound.

After this break the robbers sped by automobile across the State line into Eliot, Me., where they broke into the post-office at South Eliot, and the general store of Thomas F. Staples. They were frightened away, however, before they could gather any loot.

The third break took place a half mile away at the Eliot Trading Company office, where entrance was gained by removing a panel of the door. Here they ransacked the place, scattering papers and articles about the floor. They were unable to find any money, although there was a large sum in the office.

WET RAIDERS BUSY AT ATLANTIC CITY

Atlantic City, N. J., July 21.—Federal raiders who have been making life miserable for bootleggers here were at it again today. They swept through a couple of drug stores and left summonses or warrants as a starter. Sam H. Cone, State prohibition enforcer, who is commander of the raiders, declared his men weren't half through. Cone also said he might go after the "man higher up." He was told State Senator White had said he knew a politician who got $5 on every case of liquor in town.

CHINA MISSIONARIES REPORTED SAFE

Canton, China, July 21 (By the Associated Press).—The United States gunboat Pampanga has returned from a dash up the West River to Wuchow, where an appeal for help had been made by eight American and Canadian missionaries stationed at Linchow. The Pampanga brought back word that the missionaries were safe.

LEGION HEAD IS SAVED BY PILOT

Missoula, Mont., July 21.—Hanford MacNider, national commander of the American Legion, flying to Kalispell, after making an address here, was forced to land just after having crossed the entire length of the thirty miles of Flathead Lake. The plane came down in a potato patch. Aviator A. W. Stephenson, pilot for Mr. MacNider, saved the plane from a crash.

PROBE SPRINGFIELD LIQUOR LOSS

Springfield, July 21.—Investigation of the mysterious disappearance of $500,000 worth of whiskey, wines and bootleg liquor, found missing at the storehouse here some time ago, has been started by three agents of the Department of Justice, under the direction of United States Attorney Robert O. Harris. Permission has been secured from Chief Burns at Washington for the inspectors to work in that district.

BRITISH VESSEL HIT IN CHANNEL

Dover, England, July 21 (By International News Service).—The 24,000-ton British steamship Remuera was in collision with another vessel in the English Channel today. The Remuera reported an accident by wireless and later returned to port. There were no casualties on the Remuera, but there is no news of the other ship. Even her identity is unknown.

FIGHT, BOMB, BURN IN MINE BATTLE

Uniontown, Pa., July 21.—Mine guards and strikers fought a battle at the Dearth mine of the H. C. Frick Coke Company near here today. It is believed the mine guards had prevented an attempt to blow up the plant. Nobody was hurt. At the Lemont mine a bomb was hurled at the tipple, but it failed of its mark. The home of Deputy Sheriff Lindsay Miller, a guard at the Revere mine of the W. J. Rainey Coke Company, was burned with all its contents today.

GIRL FALLS INTO POND AND DROWNS

Rochester, N. H., July 21.—Hilda Rooney, twelve years old, was drowned in the mill pond of the Kennebunk Manufacturing Company at Milton. The girl, who was unable to swim, fell into fifteen feet of water.

Hi-po Plant Burns

South Norwalk, Conn., July 21.—The plant of the Hi-po Battery Corporation in East Norwalk was burned today. The loss is estimated at about $50,000.

LEGION HEAD'S VACATION PROVES ELOPEMENT COUP

Miss Hazel I. Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Wilson of No. 5 Elmwood terrace, and William E. Handren of No. 43 Phillips avenue, both of Swampscott, informed their families they were going vacationing.

Today they telegraphed their folks they had been married. And by return wire went parental blessing.

Attended by two of their friends, Miss Elsie Greenlaw and Edward Tracou, they were married by Rev. Arthur E. Harriman in the parsonage of the East Baptist Church, Lynn.

CITY HEALTH HEAD URGES ORGANIZED WARFARE ON MOSQUITOS

TELLS HOW TO FIGHT MENACE

Dr. Francis X. Mahoney Issues Advice on Best Way to Exterminate the Pest

Health Commissioner Francis X. Mahoney today issued a warning against the mosquito menace. He asks that organized warfare be conducted upon the pest. His plea follows:

By DR. FRANCIS X. MAHONEY, Health Commissioner of Boston.

The mosquito breeds in salt marshes, woodland pools, tin cans, rain barrels, broken bottles, undrained roof gutters, dumps, catch basins, cesspools, post holes, hoof prints, tanks in green houses, fountains, troughs, holes in trees, vases, water pitchers, toilet fixtures, clogged gutters, cuspidors, tubs, pools, aquariums and fountains without fish, margin of lakes and streams, broken crockery, wells, flower pots, street and roadside gutters, street puddles and ditches, and, in fact, every place that is undisturbed or that has become stagnant.

MANY WAYS TO HELP.

There are many ways in which the individual can assist in ridding his premises of mosquitoes and there are other ways by which action on the part of citizens of a community may rid the community of this insect. In the extermination of the rat we say "Build them out" and in the campaign against the mosquito we may say "Dry them up."

Removing the sources where mosquitoes breed, if such places are around your house, is the least expensive and the most effective method of extermination.

Kill every mosquito you see about your house. If they exist in great numbers you may destroy them by fumigation, burning of sulphur, or insect powder, but care should be taken to gather and burn the insects at once because by this process they may only be temporarily stupefied.

Where one is obliged to have water standing in tanks, barrels and other receptacles, it should at all times be covered with a material made of fine wire mesh in the form of a screen. Cesspools should be tightly covered and vents tightly screened, and stagnant water removed from any and all receptacles around your homes.

EGG-EATING ISH.

Ponds, fountains and aquariums should be provided with fish that will eat the eggs that are laid on the surface of the water. Salt marsh lands may be filled by pumping silt or sand into the low area and depressions near and about us may be filled in by cinders and ashes or clean dirt.

"Draining and ditching of marshy lands may be resorted to for large areas. The use of coal oil on the surface of water suffocates the larvae and pupae of the mosquito, and along the banks of ponds, lakes and slowly moving streams where vegetation is abundant, a light quality of oil may be used with the aid of a sprinkling pot or the surface may be sprayed with a hose. One ounce of oil is sufficient to cover fifteen square feet of water.

"Screening of premises is an effective way to combat the invasion of the mosquito, but in order to be effective the screening must be properly done and the mesh of the screen sufficiently close to keep out the mosquito.

"In screening, care must be exercised not to overlook fireplaces, ventilators and other openings. In some places where it is impossible to eliminate or exterminate the mosquito, mosquito bars over the bed have been found necessary.

"If each individual will take it upon himself to keep his own premises clean and free from stagnant water, he will do much in the way of co-operation with the community which will adopt measures on a larger scale to exterminate them."

INDIAN GIRL HUNTS WITH PRIMITIVE BOW

Folks out in the vicinity of Golden Gate Park, San Francisco, thought that some statue of Diana the Huntress had come to life recently when they saw Miss Lonely Deer of the Pine tribe of Indians hunting in the park with a bow and arrow. Miss Lonely Deer wore a costume consisting of the fure of some of the smaller fauns of California, such as squirrels and chipmunks, and not too many of them. In San Jose Miss Lonely Deer is known as Eileen Young, twenty-two, adopted daughter of Chief Four-Finger Jack of the Piutes and as a homesteader "proving" up on a 640-acre homestead in the high Sierras.

Food Prices Soar as Labor Strife Increases

Washington, July 22 (By International News Service).—While the country is beset with industrial troubles, the cost of food is steadily rising, according to figures made public by the Labor Department.

The retail cost of food to the average family for June increased 1 per cent. over May, and the increases were particularly marked in such staple necessities as meat, potatoes, beans and sugar.

FIGHT FOR NOTED BANDIT'S SCION

San Francisco, July 21.—Alleging that her husband entertained her on their honeymoon by visiting the tree where his great-great-bandit-grandfather was hanged, Mrs. Eleanor Vasquez is bringing suit in the courts here for custody of a two-year-old son.

The son is a direct descendant of Don Jose California outlaw, who gained great publicity during the early fortie. He was sought for years by the authorities.

The child, who bears his famous ancester's name, is the object of one of the bitterest battles waged in the California courts in many years. Both parents want the custody of the little boy and both have engaged prominent lawyers to represent them.

TEACHERS HIKE IN "KNICKERS"

Seattle, Wash., July 21.—Clad in natty "knickers," Miss Thurza Warren and Miss Lillian Foss, two of Ballinghan's popular young school teachers, passed through this city on their return trip from Portland, Oregon. They had walked, or "hiked" as they told it, all the way from the Oregon city.

But they haven't had enough yet so they're going to start soon on a long hike through their native State.

"There's nothing so good as a long hike along nature's roadways," chirped the two school "ma'ams," when the photographer got his lintype focused on them. "We're going to start off again as soon as we can attend to a little business at home."

On the Oregon trip, the two girls carried walking sticks cut from the trees of the forests and wore knickers and men's soft hats.

MEXICAN TRAIN LOOTED BY BANDITS

Mexico City, July 21 (By the Associated Press).—The Mexican War Department today was considering what action to take on the report, received late last night, that a Southern Pacific train was attacked a few miles from Mazatlan in the State of Sinaloa, on Wednesday, when the express car and several passengers were robbed of 20,000 pesos by followers of General Juan Carrasco, a rebel leader.

Although the train was carrying a small military convoy, the robbery was committed, according to the official report, without the firing of a single shot. General Carrasco is said to have a considerable following in Sinaloa.

HUGHES PRAISES NEW PERU PACT

Washington, July 21, (By the Associated Press).—The agreement of Chile and Peru to arbitrate their Tacna - Arica controversy was signed by the plenipotentiaries of the two governments today at a final session of the Chilean-Peruvian conference here.

The agreement was hailed by Secretary Hughes in a speech at the closing session of the conference, as a sweeping victory for the "conference plan" of international negotiation.

If war is to be prevented when internal controversies arise, the Secretary declared, it can only be accomplished through the willingness of nations to provide for "the contacts of honorable and reasonable men," who honestly desire to erase difficulties rather than to keep them alive.

The settlement, Mr. Hughes described as the greatest accomplishment of the generation in the direction of peace in the Western Hemisphere. "I believe this to be the dawn of a new day in Latin-America," he said.

ACCUSED OF CHOKING EX-EMPLOYER'S WIFE

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 21.—Frank Murphy was charged with choking his former employer's wife when arraigned in court here. According to the testimony Murphy choked Mrs. Anna Youll, 36 years old, and forced her to drink some unknown liquid from a bottle, said to be poison, because he was discharged from the employ of the woman's husband. The cameraman got busy and snapped his picture as he sat waiting trial in Brooklyn court.

WAVE HITS BATHOUSE; BATHERS IN PANIC

New York, July 21.—The swell raised by the passing of two ocean liners today struck the floating municipal bathhouse at Battery Park, crashed one end against the top of Manhattan Island and caused a panic among ten women and children undressing for a plunge into the pool.

Mrs. Sophie Gerber injured an ankle, and a number of women fell into the Hudson in their scramble to get ashore. Attendants and police fished them all out.

2 HOLYOKE SCHOOL GIRLS ARE MISSING

Holyoke, July 21.—Police are investigating the disappearance of two schoolgirls from home this week. It is believed they have been abducted. Catherine Sarewicz, thirteen years old, left her home at No. 114 High street last Sunday to go to church. Edith Feinstein, fifteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Feinstein, has been missing from her home at No. 82 West street since Wednesday.

ASKED TO GIVE DAY'S PAY TO STRIKERS

St. Louis, Mo., July 21 (By the Associated Press).—E. J. Manion, president of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, today addressed an appeal to the 80,000 members of the order, asking that each man give one day's pay to help the cause of striking railroad men and striking coal miners.

FRANKLIN PARK TO HAVE ROSE GARDEN

Mayor Curley gave orders today to Park Commissioner James H. Shea for the establishing of a rose garden in Franklin Park, in the vicinity of the elephant house. It was first contemplated to have a rose garden, fashioned after the famous ones in Paris and London, in the Arnold Arboretum. This would have been too costly and was abandoned.

Social Fame of Mrs. Thayer Due in Part to Patriotic Acts, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

MRS. LARZ ANDERSON
Mrs. Arthur G. Rotch
Mrs. Maynard Ladd
Miss Dorothy Forbes
Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer

According to Mr. Webster, the dictionary man, a patriot is "one who loves his country and zealously supports its authority and interests," and altogether, I think that describes Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer very well. At any rate, there are many who believe that Mrs. Thayer's many splendid acts of devotion to her country entitle her to be known as one of "Boston's six most noted society women." Tomorrow will see the completion of this list, four of whom are noted above with Mrs. Thayer.

A most distinguished figure is the widow of "Nat" Thayer of Fairfield street, Lancaster, and Newport, R. I. She is a tall, slender woman, her superb carriage enhancing the aristocracy of her appearance. Her hair is a marvellous white, quite as white as her flashing teeth, which she frequently reveals in a friendly smile. She is never seen, by the way, without her beloved double rope of pearls and earrings of the same jewels. These are of exceptional beauty and are most becoming to her.

IT was back in 1911 that Boston's inner social circles learned with regret of the death of Nathaniel Thayer, one of Boston's richest and best known men. His widow, formerly Miss Pauline Revere, found her life an empty one, despite the large fortune left to her, and it was not long before one heard of Mrs. Thayer being elected to this and that important committee.

When the war came, it was not long before she was made chairman of the Women's Council of National Defence in the State. Needless to say, this office entailed a good deal of hard work, which Mrs. Thayer carried through with unceasing enthusiasm. Shortly afterwards another office was bestowed upon her. This time she was appointed home economic director for the food conservation department of the State food administration, the appointment being made at the request of Food Administrator Hoover.

In 1919, accompanied by Miss Ellen Bullard, she made a trip to France, where she spent six weeks studying the relief work for the New England Division of the American Committee for Devastated France. But throughout the war Mrs. Thayer played fairy godmother to any number of soldiers, and "Good Rest," one of the houses on the huge Thayer estate at Lancaster, was frequently used as a haven for sick soldiers.

Then there was the time—in 1918—when the prominent society woman placed this entire Lancaster estate at the disposal of the army for producing food for the soldiers. And that is only one of the very many patriotic acts of Mrs. Thayer.

SINCE the war this stately matron has become intensely interested in immigration, so much so that some time ago she was made director of the division of Immigration and Americanization, Massachusetts Department of Education. Now she spends a good deal of her time behind a desk up on Beacon street, at the State House.

Which reminds me that in former years Mrs. Thayer was absolutely unaccustomed to public speaking, and found herself dreading each occasion when she was called upon to say even a few words. However, as she realized that these occasions were becoming more and more numerous, this unusual woman "made" herself overcome this difficulty, and now she is one of the most concise and crispest of speakers in this part of the country.

Just at present Mrs. Thayer is vacationing at Newport—the "pool of the goldfish," as the natives call it. The Boston woman is one of the Board of Governors of the famous Newport Casino, the bright particular spot which attracts society at all hours of the day. Just now tennis is the main magnet of interest, and each day finds the fashionable Summer colonists watching the three tournaments going on at the Casino courts.

On Wednesday Mrs. Thayer was among those entertaining at luncheon at her place, as was also Mrs. Robert Gould Shaw, 2d, another prominent member of the Boston colony at Newport.

REVERE MAN HELD IN LIQUOR CASE

Portland, Me., July 21.—George Chandler, a former policeman here, upon whose farm at Scarboro were found hidden in the ground a still, 38 quart bottles and four gallon jugs of "moonshine" whiskey, was acquitted of unlawful possession in municipal court. No probable cause was found for holding him on the charge of illegal manufacture.

Samuel Cohen of Revere, Mass., arrested in connection with the same seizures, did not fare so well. He was fined $200 and costs and given two months in jail for unlawful possession of liquor, and was held for the grand jury on the charge of illconducted in a henhouse on Chandler's farm.

U. S. INSISTS ON OPEN DOOR IN RUSSIA

Washington, July 21.—The American government has informed the world powers at The Hague conference that it countenances no arrangements made by American citizens with Soviet Russian authorities which tend to jeopardize the rights or interests of citizens of other countries.

The American charge at The Hague was instructed on July 18 to inform the powers to this effect, it was announced.

The action is a further step in maintaining the policy of this government that outside powers should refrain from "concession grabbing" in Russia and that freedom of economic opportunity should be strictly observed.

SHARON SWIMMERS IN BIG PROGRAM

Many of the best swimmers of Sharon will be on hand tomorrow for the first swimming races of the season, which will be held under the auspices of the Senior and Junior Red Cross Life Saving Corps at Lake Massapoag.

Members of the life saving corps have been training for the races and some fast time is looked for in the various events. There will be events for both men and women, and boys and girls.

Among the entries are the Misses Janet Prince, Jennie Jones, Beatrice Dorr, Mildred Dorr, Doris Poore, Laure Browne, Katherine McLaughlin, Phyllis O'Brien and Frank McLaughlin, Frank Hawley, George Gorehan, Joseph Wilde, Arthur Armstrong and others. Life Saver and Swimming Instructor George Broome has been coaching the young swimmers.

20 HURT, 4 ARRESTS IN WHISKEY RIOT

Reading, Pa., July 21.—Twenty persons are in local hospitals, eight in a serious condition, and four others, Earl Snyder, Otto Wentzel, Dency Eyrist and Charles Eyrist, prominent local athletes, are under arrest, charged with inciting riot following a free-for-all fight between alleged bootleggers, whiskey runners and consumers here today which involved 200 persons.

GARLAND HAZY ABOUT 'GIFT OF MILLION'

Charles Garland says he has completed all arrangements for the disposition of his million dollars, and is once more at work as an humble farmer on his little farm in the North Carver woods.

He refuses to discuss the disposal of his fortune, except to say that the original statement issued from New York announcing the gift is "not true to fact."

Just wherein the statement is wrong young Garland steadfastly refuses to say. In fact the giving away of a fortune seems to have had no effect on the peculiar young idealist at all. He is the same Garland that stared vacantly into space as he talked last Winter of his great and undying love for his "soul mate," Lillian Conrad. He gazes far away now as he talks of his gift and seems to be walking apart from the world.

Pressed for an explanation as to the purpose of the reported gift of a million dollars, Garland politely, but firmly, declined to talk.

"I have nothing to say to the press regarding the money in any way," he declared. "I do not care to be quoted in the press any more. I am through talking to the newspapers. Arrangements have been completed in this matter in New York and from Walter Nelles a statement will be issued explaining all there is to be explained. Whatever Mr. Nelles says will be authentic. But he must do the talking. I shall not."

JAMES M. COX TO BE POINCARE'S GUEST

Paris, July 21 (By the Associated Press).—Former Governor James M. Cox of Ohio will be the guest of Premier Poincare at a dinner at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs tomorrow evening. A number of higher French officials will be present. Mr. Cox, who was quoted today by French morning newspapers on the League of Nations and other subjects, told the correspondent that the only statement on the league which he had made was that while government's came and went the league was a steady, lasting force, and therefore the hope of the world.

MANSFIELD'S DEFENSE MAY BE 'THAT NO MURDER WAS COMMITTED'

NEW MAN SOUGHT IN CASE

Limousine and Alleged Visit of Stranger to House Since Murder New Clews

George H. Mansfield, held without bail for the murder of Mrs. Alice Irenia Jones, may offer an unique defense.

According to a statement today by Former Mayor William E. Weeks of Everett, who will be Mansfield's counsel, it may be alleged as a defence that no murder was committed.

After a three-hour interview with his client in the Charles street jail, Attorney Weeks, expressing confidence in the innocence of Mansfield, said:

"Mansfield is not guilty of the murder of Mrs. Jones, if a murder was committed."

Mr. Weeks heavily stressed the "if." He was informed of Medical Examiner Leary's report that the woman had been severely beaten and then strangled to death. He refused to enlarge upon his statement other than to emphasize the possibility that the death of Mrs. Jones may not have been a murder.

The police investigation today turned on the theory that some unidentified stranger had learned the secret of the death of Mrs. Jones at least four days before it became general knowledge.

The disfigured body of the murdered woman was found lying on the floor of her apartment at No. 556 Tremont street early yesterday morning.

SEEMED TO BE SHOCKED.

On Monday a limousine drew up in front of the house. A well-dressed man, a stranger to the neighborhood, got out, took a key, and entered the house. It is believed by neighbors who saw him that he went to Mrs. Jones' rooms.

A few moments later he reappeared. He was hurrying, and gave evidence of having received a great nervous shock. Hastening to his car, he entered, slammed the door and drove rapidly away.

Did this man unwittingly intrude on the secret which was locked behind the door of Mrs. Jones' apartment? If so, who was he, and why did he leave without making known his discovery?

These are questions the police are trying to solve.

The police interviewed Adam J. Amerhine of No. 88 Waltham street, which is just around the corner from the Tremont street boarding house. Amerhine is the man who saw the limousine.

He gave a further description of it, saying that it had red stripes and was of a light blue color. The man who entered the house, Amerhine said, was about five feet nine inches tall and wore a blue suit with a light pencil stripe, and a straw hat.

"I have seen that man around the neighborhood twice before, but this is the first time I ever saw him come in an automobile. He let himself into the house with a key, I believe. When he came out he ran to the automobile as though he were pursued.

The car then headed off toward Boston at high speed."

George H. Mansfield, who is being held for police, charged with murder, was stigmatized by his family as a wife-deserter and a home-destroyer, when a Boston American reporter called at their home, No. 769 Broadway, Everett. Mrs. Mansfield and her two sons, Edward, nineteen years old, and seventeen year-old Frank, are living there.

BECAME INFATUATED.

Mrs. Jones, Edward said, formerly occupied an apartment beneath that of the Mansfields. Until her arrival, the boy said, his father had been a dutiful head of the family. But he seemed to become infatuated with her, and spent more and more time in her company. Mansfield and Mrs. Jones drank a great deal, Edward said, and this eventually led to the break-up of their respective homes.

Three years ago Mrs. Mansfield was obliged to sue her husband for non-support. She secured a court order compelling him to pay her $4 a week. This he paid until about a year ago, when he disappeared. He has not been home since.

Once, a few months ago, his wife met him on the street in Boston. He said he was out of work, but that he would get a job shortly and make more payments to her. Since that time he has not been seen by his family.

Mansfield, investigation showed, had planned to bring Mrs. Jones down to his place on Shawsheen farm, Bedford, and make his home with her there. He told neighbors there that he was going to bring his "wife" down shortly, and in his room were many photographs of the woman.

Knew Mrs. Jones

RUTH BENDER,

Resident of suite above that of Mrs. Alice Irene Jones, who was murdered in her home at No. 556 Tremont street, South End.

WOMAN BURNED WITH ACID IN MURDER PLOT

Washington, July 21.—"Find the woman!"

In this command to the police of Washington and Baltimore and the legal authorities of Prince George County, Md., is believed to rest the solution of one of the strangest and most cold-blooded murder plots in the police annals of this part of the United States.

The intended victim of the plot is Mrs. Louise Brooks, pretty young wife of Nace Brooks of Mount Rainier, Md., a suburb of the National Capital. With her eyes heavily bandaged, she hovers between partial loss of her sight and total blindness, the result of an attack with acid.

TIED TO AUTO.

But for police intervention, it is declared, her body now would be lying in an old, abandoned vault on a nearby farm, where the plotters had planned to take her after carrying out their murderous scheme last night. Three previous attempts to kill her—two by dashing acid upon her and a third by tying her to an automobile and dragging her to death—failed.

The missing woman, believed to hold the key to the mystery, is described as a "tall brunette, married, about twenty or twenty-two years old." The police are searching Baltimore for her.

Family discord and an alleged quadrangle, with the vented wrath of a jealous wife, is the theory on which detectives are working. One arrest already has been made, but the prisoner, Arche Walters, Baltimore & Ohio Railroad employe, living in Baltimore, stoutly denies any knowledge whatever of the crime.

PLOT BARED TO POLICE.

The climax to the plot came when Bradley Cavey, another B. & O. employe of Baltimore, appealed to Constable Thomas H. Garrison of Hyattsville, Md., whose jurisdiction embraces Mount Rainier, to arrest Walters and frustrate the murder plot scheduled to have been carried out Wednesday night.

According to Cavey, Mrs. Brooks was to have been slain and her body concealed in the disused vault. The plotters, he said, had set in their preparations as to break the lock on the vault. Investigation confirmed this statement and further revealed that stone slab on top of one of the tombs had been removed and placed on top of an adjoining tomb, apparently to facilitate the ghastly work of hiding away the intended victim.

Cavey also turned over to Constable Garrison six unsigned letters sent to Mrs. Brooks, threatening her life.

ACID HURLED IN FACE.

Mrs. Brooks claimed that she was lured to a lonely spot on the B. & O. Railroad by a cleverly worked note in a woman's handwriting and that as she arrived at the appointed place, the other woman approached her, carrying a paper cup in her hand. As they came within a few feet of each other, the "tall brunette" dashed the contents of the cup, burning acid, into her face, exclaiming:

"I'll fix you now for good!"

Mrs. Brooks, blinded, stumbled and crawled to her home, while the other woman fled.

BOY WRITER NOW HAS A RIVAL

Chicago, July 21.—Another boy is following in the footsteps of Howard Wade, boy author, noted for his interviews and stories of the nation's greatest men. Willmore Kendall, Jr., thirteen-year-old Chicago boy, will enter North-western University next Fall. Then he's going to enter a school of journalism and his one great ambition is to become a newspaper writer.

Drops Ad in Jewish Paper Upon Threat of Ku Klux

By Associated Press.

St. Louis, Mo., July 21.—Robert I. Young of St. Joseph, candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, in a letter made public today, said he had received notice from the Ku Klux Klan to remove a campaign advertisement which he had contracted for insertion in the Jewish Record, a local Hebrew language newspaper, because "the Jew is after the almighty dollar and ending to hell with the country."

Fred Weismann, attorney for the newspaper, made public the letter which Young wrote the paper in explanation of his refusal to fulfil the contract.

An excerpt from the letter read: "I am no moral coward, but I do not care to get a coat of tar and feathers."

Counsel for the paper announced suit would be filed against Young to collect money due it under the contract.

SOMERVILLE BOY HURT BY AUTO

Alfred Igrons, fifteen years old, of No. 16 Gilman street, Somerville, sustained fractures of both legs today when he was struck by an automobile on Washington street, near Lawrence street, West Roxbury.

The boy, with three companions, leaped from the running board of a moving machine into the path of another operated by Leonard H. Leverson of No. 128 Humboldt avenue, Roxbury, and owned by George Collins Company, Inc.

The injured boy was picked up by two women autoists, Mrs. Lothrop Weld and Miss Mary Royce, and taken to Dedham Emergency Hospital. From there he was transferred to Boston City Hospital.

His companions, Fred Wilson, No. 36 Oliver street; Clyde Tuck, No. 38 Oliver street, and Frank O'Leary, Fountain avenue, all of Somerville, were not struck. According to the police, they jumped when they thought the car in which they were riding was about to collide with a truck.

FINDS OFFICE BOARDED UP AGAIN

For the second time in three months, Samuel E. Nelson, Marlboro real estate dealer, has found his store boarded up. This time, however, Mr. Nelson arrived too early in the morning to give evidence a chance to remove the property in the store to the sidewalk, as was done last time. So today Sam is carrying on his real estate business through telephone in a shop with pine-board windows, instead of display of real estate from an alleyway, as he did April 26.

"It's this Charles Wentworth," said Sam. "He bought this block a few months ago and ordered me to move, which he hasn't got a right to do. I have a five-year lease on the place. And the matter is pending in court now.

"When I got here this morning I found the place boarded up just as it was last April. Only the sun rises earlier in July than it does in April and they didn't have time to move the stuff out on to the sidewalk as they did before, because it got light too early. They haven't got a chance of getting in here now. It's kind of dark inside, though."

It seems that Wentworth has a building permit to alter the front of the building. Nelson claims now that Wentworth got the permit by misrepresentation.

BLAME MADMAN FOR MURDER OF GIRL

Baltimore, July 21.—Beautiful Belle Lemon was slain by a madman, police think. Her body was found near the fashionable Rolling Road Country Club in suburb. Her throat was cut and the body horribly mutilated. It is believed her slayer brought her to the lonely spot on a motorcycle, then committed the crime. He is being traced by the vehicle he fled away in.

CONNECTICUT MAN NEW SCHOOL HEAD

Clinton G. Farnham, principal of New Britain, Ct., High School, a graduate of Yale and Columbia, has been appointed principal of the Winchester High School to succeed Edward H. Thompson. Thompson was dismissed June 23, after a lengthy controversy between a citizens' committee and the high school faculty committee.

Bar Boston Man's Lie Detector in Murder Case

Dr. William M. Marston of Boston attempted to introduce his sphygmomanometer, or lie detector, in a murder case in Washington today.

The case was one in which James Alphonso Fryo is alleged to have slain Dr. Robert W. Brown.

Chief Justice Walter I. McCoy refused to permit the use of Dr. Marston's device, saying:

"Some day, when the instrument has attained the same degree of efficiency as the telegraph or telephone, it may be possible to make good use of the device in court. But not yet."

British Ships in Collision

Dover, Eng., July 21 (By International News Service).—The 24,000-ton British steamship Remuera was reported today to have collided with an unknown steamship in the English channel. The Remuera sent word by wireless she was returning to port because of an accident.

UNDERHILL TO HAVE RIVAL FOR SEAT

Characterizing the attitude of Charles L. Underhill toward ex-service men and labor as "most contemptible," Commander Arthur B. Healey of the Somerville Post No. 19, American Legion, has resigned his position to oppose Underhill for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Ninth Congressional District.

"It seems tolerably clear that no American who believes in the sacredness of the constitution will support that man who has been unprogressive, unconstructive and reactionary during his whole career," says Healey.

Edwards to Dedicate Memorial

Major-General C. R. Edwards will dedicate a large boulder commemorating the deeds of the seventy young men who served in the World War, on July 23, at Vineyard Haven. The general will spend several days in this locality.

PITTSFIELD MAYOR TO RUN FOR CONGRESS

Pittsfield, July 21.—Mayor Michael W. Flynn has announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for representative to Congress in the first district. Congressman Allen T. Treadway of Stockbridge will be the Republican candidate.

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

We are all interested in success. There are lots of successes which are never heard about. There is one notable one in the investment world which, although well known among the financial community, is not so well known among the public.

This success has been achieved by Clarence Dillon, of Dillon, Read & Co.

The title of this firm used to be William A. Read & Co. The late Mr. Read built up a large business mainly by his phenomenal ability to judge the value of investments. When he died there emerged a youngish associate who, although he had kept scrupulously in the background, was coming to be recognized as a genius at analyzing security offerings and winnowing the wheat from the chaff. His success, very quietly nurtured for many years, blossomed into public view shortly after he became head of the house under its changed name, Dillon, Read & Co. Today the mainspring of this outstanding firm, Clarence Dillon, is respected throughout the investment world as one of its most notable leaders.

It may interest many successseekers to know that Mr. Dillon, who is only 42, isn't the slave of his business, notwithstanding that he has built up such a remarkable organization and has won signal recognition in the financial world both at home and abroad. Mr. Dillon takes as many and as long holidays as his young son gets from school. When school is closed, so is Mr. Dillon's desk. This means that his office sees little or nothing of him during at least two months in the Summer, a week at Easter and two or three weeks at Christmas and New Year.

I set out to tell you how Mr. Dillon sizes up the European situation, not to write a column about why his conclusions are worthy of great respect. Let us hasten to the point without another word.

"The only foundation on which prosperity can be rebuilt in Europe is the security of France," declares Mr. Dillon, who has just returned.

"France does not feel that she has received adequate guarantees of her safety in the future.

Were we in France's place, we would doubtless feel the same way as she feels after her past unhappy experiences.

"Germany appears headed for a serious political upheaval, but not any social upheaval such as we have witnessed in Russia and Austria. The mark is certain to sink lower and lower until Germany can help herself compelled to establish a new currency system. Meanwhile, I believe Germany will resort more and more to the use of foreign currencies —francs, guilders and, perhaps, dollars and pounds until her own currency can be reorganized. German workmen cannot be expected to tolerate much longer the hardships inflicted upon them by the steady rise in the mark's purchasing power.

"I believe, however, that once France can be satisfied as to her future safety, the proposed German loan can be arranged and all other difficulties straightened out.

"American bankers and American investors, once convinced that the European clouds were passing, would start furnishing money to dependable European enterprises, just as British bankers and investors have done, with profitable results, for two generations.

"Italy is facing her problem most courageously and taxing her people to the limit in her effort to balance her budget. Britain will pay her debt to us regardless of what happens to the debts owed her. Russia is still impossible to deal with. It is pleasant to know, however, that the Russians are tremendously grateful to America for what she has done for her starving people."

Mr. Dillon added, with a smile, that after seeing at first hand the conditions in Europe, whatever troubles we may think we have at home are quite unimportant. He looks for even still easier money and, as a consequence, a good bond market.

Oils, Steels and Motors Rally After Weakness on Big Board; Renewal 4%

PIERCE-ARROW ISSUES SET YEAR'S LOW

Oils, steels and motors rallied in New York after a firm opening, followed by a display of weakness in bear raiding. Renewal money was at 4 per cent.

Pierce-Arrow issues, upset by refinancing rumors, made new lows for the year, the common at 23 off 1¾, and the preferred at 35, off 3, then rallied a bit, but remained soft.

Highs for the year were made by Pennsylvania at 45, up ¾; Industrial Alcohol, up 3 at 82¾; North American Co., up 2¾ at 79¾; and Mack Trucks, up 3⅝ at 58⅝.

Ann Harbor preferred lifted to 61½, up 1¾.

Studebaker surged over 2 at 135⅝. Keystone Tire, off 1¾ at 12, struck a new 1922 low.

U. S. Steel, after rising ⅝ to 102, sold down to 100¾. Vanadium scarcely 2¾ at 47. Crucible lowered 2¾ at 113¾.

Bethlehem B and Gulf lost over a point.

Mexican Petroleum, after rising 4¼ to 172¾, went to 168½. General Asphalt was 1⅞ off at 70¾. Standard Oil of New Jersey 3⅜ at 173½. Pure Oil 1¾ at 36⅞⅜ and Standard Oil of California 3 at 102¾.

Baldwin was up 1¾ at 120⅝, then lowered to 118⅝.

Wall St. Gossip

J. S. BACHE & CO.—"There is still a disposition to take railroad and coal strikes and foreign situation seriously, but so much underlying confidence prevails that stocks prefer to discount what is immediately ahead, rather than be temporarily influenced by momentary situations."

PRINCE & WHITELEY—"Those waiting for rail and coal strikes to be settled may have to pay considerably higher prices."

J. S. BACHE & CO.—"On the whole we still see every indication of higher prices."

E. F. HUTTON & CO.—"We see no reason to doubt the continuation of the rising market, particularly in investment issues."

VANADIUM reports net earnings for six months ending June 30 of $1,166,000, equal to 4 cents a share, compared with deficit of $64,294 in same period of 1921.

PIERCE-ARROW weakness appears to be a reflection of continued uncertainty over refinancing plan. Output for first half of year is said to have been around 80 per cent. of capacity.

ST. PAUL is expected to earn fixed charges this year, although it failed to attain them in the first five months.

NEW YORK CENTRAL has listed $22,478,880 additional capital stock, making total amount authorized to be listed $373,823,240.

GULF STATES STEEL net operating income for quarter ended June 30 was $813,740, against $24,386 corresponding period of 1921.

BROWN SHOE'S new high for 1922 was made on report of early resumption of dividends.

NORTHERN PACIFIC oversubscription in huge volume indicates much summer seeking investment. Many big bond houses received but one bond for every ten subscribed for.

SUGAR PRICES continue to rise, and effect should be shown more clearly in stock issues.

BROOKLYN RAPID TRANSIT reports it earned over 15 per cent. on capital stock for year ended June 30 last.

NATIONAL ENAMELING is reported soon to resume common dividend on strength of greater earnings. July output is said to have been at rate of about 12 per cent. on common, it is stated.

AMERICAN CAN, if report is to be believed, will this year surpass earnings of war-born period.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD'S loadings for the first fourteen days of July were 63,710 cars, an increase of 12.3 per cent.

OBSTACLES TO proposed merger of Electric Alloy Steel Company and Atlas Crucible Steel Company are insufficient to prevent combination, interested parties say.

WHEAT PRICES IN CHICAGO ARE UP

Wheat prices rose in Chicago. Late quotations were: July 1.14⅜, up 1½; September 1.12⅜, up ; December 1.14⅛, up ⅝.

Corn—July 83¾, up ⅝; September 65, up ½; December 62¾, up 1⅛.

Oats—July 34½, up ⅝; September 35⅝, off ; December 35⅛, off ⅛.

BIG DECREASE IN LEATHER FAILURES

Failures, embarrassments, etc., in shoe, leather and kindred lines in the United States and Canada for the past week, as compiled by the Shoe & Leather Mercantile Agency, Inc., numbered 6, against 34 for the preceding week and 41 for the corresponding period of 1921.

LIBERTYS RISE TO FRESH 1922 HIGHS

United States war loans continued to feature the big bond market. New high records were made by all of the Liberty 4¼ per cents. The first issue rose to 101.30, the second to 100.88, the third to 100.94 and the fourth to 101.84.

MEX PETE RAISES PRICES FOR OIL

New York, July 21.—Mexican Petroleum Co. has advanced the price of industrial fuel oil 25 cents per barrel along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts. This advance is said to be due to coal shortage and to restriction in the Tampico-Cerro Azul pool in Mexico. Mexican Petroleum Co. refuses to make any contracts for fuel oil beyond six months.

MOTHER WANTS HOME FOR BABY AND SELF

"Will someone find a home for mr baby and me?"

Six of her children already being cared for in a home, Mrs. Mary Pregouka, taking refuge in a neighbor's home at 18 Adams street, Roxbury, asks shelter from someone for herself and her three-months-old baby.

With her seven children, the eldest only seven years old Mrs. Pregouka was evicted from the tenement she occupied at No. 46 Hampden street, Roxbury, by her landlord, Arthur Siegal, when, he declared, she became two months in arrears in the rent.

Learning of the woman's situation from the police, Father John O'Brien of St. Patrick's Church succeeded in having the six elder children cared for at the Home for Destitute Catholic Children. The husband and father is in incurable at the Consumptive Hospital at Mattapan.

Mrs. Pregouka declared today that she had been receiving $15 a week from the city and five dollars' worth of groceries.

"But it wasn't enough to pay the rent and feed the children, too," she protested. "I have to have four quarts of milk a day and that takes over fifty cents. I had to buy shoes and a few pieces of clothes for the children and I owed bills on food that I bought when my husband was ill and loafing before he was taken to the hospital.

"If I could just find a tenement somewhere, I could take my children back and care for them myself.

Mrs. Pregouka, with her six children, went to Dudley street police station Wednesday night, asking shelter. A collection was taken up among the officers to provide food for them. The hasty meal prepared for the woman and her flock had been entirely devoured at the end of a few minutes.

Mrs. Sarah Smith, who is providing Mrs. Pregouka with temporary shelter, declared that she could not afford to feed or keep her.

"My husband earns only $19 a week," she said, "and ten of my children are already dead because they didn't have enough or the right kind of food when they were babies."

FATALITY IS LAID TO STEERING GEAR

Lawrence, July 21.—The case of John Bourasse of No. 399 Salem street, charged with manslaughter when his automobile ran down and killed a city employee working on the Broadway canal bridge July 11 last, was continued for hearing until October 10 next, the court commenting that it was an action for the civil court. The victim was James Fitzgerald of No. 34 Ames street. Bourasse claimed his steering wheel was broken but the prosecution asserted that he was running thirty miles an hour when the accident happened. James Conley, another city employee working with Fitzgerald, was seriously injured in the crash.

FOKKER TO MOVE PLANT TO AMERICA

Chicago, July 21.—Stunt flying has done much to hinder the advance of aviation in America, said A. H. G. Fokker, famous Dutch airplane builder, in an interview here. Mr. Fokker plans to move his headquarters to America.

JUDGE DEFENDS GIRL SMOKERS AND KNICKERS

New York, July 21.—Use of cigarettes and knickerbockers by women was defended by County Judge McLaughlin in Brooklyn.

He said the use of those things was not suggestively wrong.

His utterances were made when he freed Mrs. Edna Heych, eighteen, reversing her conviction on a charge of vagancy last February by Magistrate McClosky.

Mrs. Heych was arrested in a bungalow at Bergen Beach with Jeannette Handler, fifteen, and Vincent Lawless, nineteen, of Brooklyn. The judge said:

"I find nothing wrong or even suggestively wrong in wearing such a costume. That sort of costume is extensively used by women in the outdoor life, and is generally recognized not only as proper, but as conventional.

"Nor do I consider the fact that defendant was smoking a cigarette evidence of moral depravity."

FLEECED OUT OF $50 MATCHING PENNIES

Walter Gottou of Gloucester met two "friendly" strangers as he alighted from the Gloucester train.

"They asked how the fish crop was down there," he declared. "Then they suggested we match pennies. We matched until I lost $50. Now I know they played it together and 'hooked' me."

FIGHTING AUTO PARTIES GET CONTINUANCE

Salem, N. H., July 21.—The free-for-all fight between two groups of motorists on Hampshire road, near here, early Tuesday morning, brought eight men, two of them Lawrence police officers, into the District Court here. The cases against the men were continued until July 27.

The defendants gave their names as Amherst McCartney, Joseph Young, George O'Brien and John J. Purcell, all of Lawrence; Thomas Maguire and William McMiller, of Springvale, Me., and Patrolmen Patrick Ford and Patrick McKenna of the Lawrence police department.

According to Sheriff Fred Chrysler, McCartney and the three other Lawrence young men were driving toward Lawrence, when they encountered another car containing the two officers, Miller and McGuire, with two women.

The officers' car was parked, he said, and the Lawrence men stopped to inquire if they could be of any assistance. When they did so they were attacked, it is asserted, and a fight followed that lasted more than thirty minutes.

Revolver shots punctured the battle, it is claimed, and all the participants are said to have been bruised and hurt during the struggle.

Question Box for Radio Fans

K. W. C., Cambridge—Tubes will last much longer if they are upright instead of being mounted so that they are on their side. This is because the filament sags to a slight degree, especially when heated. For best results tubes should be stored upright. You can change your panel very easily to make this possible by building a small shelf for the tube socket to rest on.

R. L. S., Newton—The three tube super-regenerative set is simply a two-tube set with one stage of radio frequency amplification. This will bring in the signals much more loudly, but will not greatly increase the range. The ordinary cascade amplification is impossible, due to an intricate problem on harmonics, which explains why the hook-up for the third tube is different from the usual one-stage radio-frequency amplification.

L. J. B., Somerville—The grid leak may be simply a pencil line on the cover of the grid condenser. Get your set tuned up and going and then make a pencil line with a soft pencil from one end of the grid condenser to the other, being sure that the line connects with the circuit at both ends. Make the line broader, or erase part of it with an ordinary eraser until the signals are clearest. Different makes of tubes may require slightly different grid leaks but the same tubes are near enough alike in practice to make special leaks unnecessary.

CHURCHMEN CHARGE BODY SUBSTITUTED IN GRAVE MYSTERY

CHILD CRUSHED TO DEATH AND ANOTHER IN- jured by Motor Truck. When the truck of Blinn & Morrill Co. parked in front of No. 181 Endicott street, North End, a dozen children swarmed on it. One pulled operating lever. Alphonso Bucchino, No. 198 Endicott street (shown in circle), was near the rear wheel and was crushed to death. Vincent Stunati, No. 130 Prince street, jumped and suffered broken leg. Arrow points to body of victim covered by sheet.

GREAT CODFISH— Lookit What He Annexed! Anitro Karsait of No. 152 Putnam street, East Boston, landed this off Boston Light—also a prize of 11¢. It took 20 minutes of the hardest fighting with two gaffs to land him. Largest and gamest cod of the season.

JEWISH CHURCHMEN CHARGE BODY OF OLD MAN WAS SUBSTITUTED in Woburn cemetery to discourage probe of grave mystery! Photo shows men opening the grave in the Anshei Leibowitz cemetery, at the bottom of which the body of a young girl is believed to have rested. At a depth of three feet the body of an old man was found. The State declined to investigate further. Members of congregation swear that on June 1 a fresh coffin was found at depth of 6½ feet. Inset shows undertaker who is alleged to have buried the old man.

CAT SILHOUETTES ARE ALL TO THE PUSSY'S pedigree, according to Norma Pinkus of Revere (above). You just paste the li'l black paper felines on your arm, or ankle, and let the sun do the rest. Take 'em off at night and you have a nice decoration of velvety white skin. The fad is new and nifty.

HOCH DER GOOT PAJAMAS! JUST FOR A CHANGE let's take a little trip to the Berlin capital for our fashion hint! So this is Berlin!—and we have with us an exquisite pajama creation of pale blue satin trimmed with soft fur. Figures artistically dot the satin. Light and soft, it is ideal for Summer wear. TRAININ' FOR NAT BUT- ler's race track. Little George Curley, the Mayor's young son, is at it to shatter a few records on a new bike. His ma, who is shown with him, says it's great exercise for one of Boston's potential Mayors.

SHOOTS AT WIFE AND HER WOULD-BE RESCUER in jealous rage! Believing his wife was receiving attentions of other men, William Pistila, 27, of No. 40 Arthur street, Quincy (right circle), shot twice at his wife on Smith street, Quincy, and then turned the gun on Otto Johnson (left circle), who tried to save Mrs. Pistila. The latter, shown in centre, was unhurt. Pistila was captured in a quarry.

BEACHCOMBING GOLD DOLLARS ON THE SAND IS the latest sport! Ask these girls, they know! Today's Sea Beauty winners are Miss Miriam Firth, P. O. Box 12, Bolton, Mass. BOSTON AERIAL ENTHUSIASTS TO JOIN WITH REST OF COUNTRY IN Observing 13th Anniversary of Wright Brothers' First Airplane Flight! On July 27, 1909, first history for the heavier than air flying machine was written when Orville Wright (shown in circle), in this curious contrivance, established during a test a record of one hour and 20 minutes continuous flight before government officials at Fort Myer, Va. Three days later he travailed 20 miles, an astounding feat then. Photo shows the actual flight in first test. (International News Reel).

IF YOU "DON'T BELONG" YOU CAN'T JOIN THE EXCLUSIVE NAHANT SET IN ENJOYING THE SOOTHING BREEZES WAFTED IN on the boulevard facing "Forty Steps Beach"! The Nahant selectmen passed an ordinance to prevent motorists from parking cars along the beautiful avenues of Nahant for more than 10 minutes! There wasn't a murmur from anybody. But when signs appeared on the avenue fronting beautiful "Forty Steps Beach" reading "No Parking Here" that class which just owns "homes"—not estates—became frothy at the mouth. Selectmen told the "homesteaders" that the signs were erected by the estaters to assure more privacy. The dotted line on the photo shows part of the disputed area. Senator Lodge and Mrs. Thomas P. Curtis, both "estaters," are shown in circles.

MORE MILLS MAY SETTLE STRIKES

By CHARLES O. POWER.

Manchester, N. H., July 21.—As announced in the Boston American Thursday, the New Market Mills are anxious to settle the strike with their employes and will confer with them tomorrow for that purpose.

The company in New Market is not the only one that is desirous for peace and the resumption of industry on full time and amicable relations with their workers. Officials of another New Hampshire company have let it become known to strike leaders that they would like to see the strike settled upon a friendly basis.

ORDER FROM OVERLORDS.

These officials are practically in charge of the mills, but unfortunately they are not the real powers and cannot do anything without the approval of certain men in Boston. The new Hampshire mill men have told the Boston money men that the strike should be adjusted and have been warned by the latter not to enter into any definite arrangement with or make any binding promises to former employes before seeing the mill officials in Manchester.

This order of the absentee landlords in Boston means there is an understanding between the real controlling interests of the textile industry of New England and that, in this particular New Hampshire case, no action tending toward a settlement is to be thought of which does not suit the wishes of the Amoskeag company.

The story is going the rounds of strike circles that Frederick C. Dumaine of Boston, the big boss of Amoskeag, has been calling upon the local mill officials in Newmarket and Exeter for the purpose of stiffening their spinal columns.

STRIKERS FORESEE HITCH.

While the textile workers were greatly pleased to learn that Agent W. B. Gallant of the Newmarket mills is anxious and willing to dicker with striking employes and is outspoken in his desire for resumption of work, they fear he will not be able to withstand the pressure that will be brought to bear against him by the king pin of the New England textile world before Saturday morning at the time appointed for the strike settlement conference.

"We hope and pray that a satisfactory adjustment may be reached at New Market," say the Amoskeag strikers in this city, "but knowing the influences that will be at work to prevent it, we will be most agreeably surprised if the New Market Company asserts its independence and goes through to the limit. But that company's present attitude is a good sign, a most encouraging sign."

Judge Oliver W. Branch handed down a decision allowing the Amoskeag strikers two pickets at each mill gate. This is a modification of the order issued about a month ago by Judge W. H. Sawyer, denying the strikers the use of any pickets.

By Judge Branch's order all strikers but the pickets are enjoined from loitering in the vicinity of mills. Strikers consider this modification a great moral victory.

CARUSO IS HELD FOR GRAND JURY

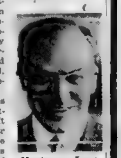
Lawrence, July 21.—Vito Caruso, charged with murdering his wife, Maria Caruso, was held without bail for the Grand Jury in the District Court. His brother, Stephano Caruso, charged with being an accessory before the fact, as held in $2,500 bonds for the Grand Jury.

Dr. George W. Dow, medical examiner; Sebastiano Dominico, undertaker; and Joseph Fascina, assistant to Dominico, were grilled by counsel for the defence and by the court as to the circumstances under which the autopsy was performed and the care of the body after its removal to the undertaking parlors of Dominico and Campo-piano.

MOVIE WORLD NEWS AND GOSSIP

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

IT WAS the hottest day—you know which one. . I found Montague Love backstage at the St. James Theatre engaged in the cool pastime of climbing into a heavy Winter overcoat. He looked reproachful, distinctly reproachful.



Montague Love

"An actor's life," he muttered, as he left the wings for his last entrance in the day's performance of "Bought and Paid For," "is not a ha-a-appy one!"

When the curtain lumbered down for the last time, he stood in the centre of the stage and literally buried himself out of the cast.

"Ha!" he said with relief and came back to talk to me. "It's hot, isn't it?"

There seemed to be some question as to what he would talk about, the stage or the screen. I wanted to talk about the latter, but he is more interested in the footlights. Furthermore, his film plans are not ready for too much publicity.

"The movie situation is terrible," he started in. "No one can get a job. It's bad in Hollywood, but it's worse in New York. The agents' offices are jammed with actors and actresses and extras trying to get chances. Lord, but it's hot!"

Mr. Love may talk about the movie situation, but he need scarcely worry over it. He has signed on the dotted line for a new pictures to be made when he finishes "Bought and Paid For" at the St. James. But then, he told me not to say anything about that! And next Winter he'll alternate between Klieghts and footlights.

MORE ACTORS NEEDED.

The only thing he has not gone in for in his line of work is pantomime and ballet. He has been on the stage and on the screen and has been making personal appearances. He is, I may say, one of the few who is able to come forward at the end of his picture and look his audience squarely in the face. He is nicer "in person," than "in shadow." He is far more cheerful and less hard and cynical. But then off-stage he isn't acting a part.

On one thing he stands pat.

"I'm tired of hearing of producers starring and featuring the types they pick up. When they have a story they run out into the highways and byways and sign up all those who look the part. Whether or not these players can act or not is immaterial. What the movies need are more actors and fewer Vogue and Arrow Collar ads. Lord, but it's hot, isn't it?"

And I thought of him in the third act of "Bought and Paid For," hurrying smilingly onto the stage in his Winter coat. And I thought of the third act the next day and the next. Lord, but wasn't it hot!

SOMETHING DIFFERENT.

WHEN you first see Marion Davies in her next production, "The Young Diana," you'll think there's been a mistake. But you'll be wrong. It's Miss Davies, but she is playing a character role. In this story, by Marie Corelli, she is seen as a sere and embittered old maid who, like Rider Haggard's She, goes through an ordeal in order to become beautiful.

In this case, it is neither the new gland-grafting, nor face-lifting, but some sort of operation on the brain. The result of the operation, judging from the photographs that have reached my desk, are quite dazzling. Miss Davies is supported by Pedro de Cordoba, Maciyn Arbuckle, Forrest Stanley and Gypsy O'Brien. Robert Vignola and Albert Capellani directed.

CHARLES RAY'S NEXT

CHARLES RAY is hard at work on the picture to follow "The Tailor-Made Man," scheduled for Fall release. This will be "Alias Julius Caesar," which will close his contract with First National. After that he will make independent productions to be released through United Artists. "The Tailor-Made Man" was made for the latter company while he was ahead of his schedule for First National.

MAE ALLISON AGAIN.

MAY ALLISON and her co-star husband, Robert Ellis, have returned to New York after having been "on location" in Porto Rico for some months, where they filmed "The Woman Who Fooled Herself," for Associated Exhibitors.

Their contract calls for two more productions, but what they will be nor whether they will be has not yet been decided.

JOCK MALONE IS DISGRACE TO IRISH, DECLARES WALKER

MICKEY IN ATTACK ON ST. PAUL FIGHTER

By JACK CONWAY.

"Jock Malone is a disgrace to the Irish!"

This is what Mickey Walker had to say when informed that the St. Paul junior middleweight wanted to fight in Boston and that he desired to have Walker as an opponent.

Mickey Walker

"Malone had a chance to fight me a month ago at the Arena," continued Mickey. "But he got cold feet and ran out of the match. He claimed he had an injured hand, but that was the well-known bunk. The sore spot was around the heart. He had been tipped about how easily I knocked Pal Reed over, and he didn't want to receive similar treatment.

"Malone is Irish, which creates a rather unusual situation. I'm Irish myself, but, like virtually all of the Irish, am not a quitter. It's bad enough for members of non-fighting races to display a yellow streak, but when an Irishman dodges a fight—well, I guess he's not Irish.

"Talk is cheap. That's why Malone is making the screech about desiring to meet me in Boston. If Jock wants to meet me, I think we can arrange it. Have the affair decided in New York or Newark, for both of those places I'm a big card, while there are people in New York who think Malone is a champion. JACK MALONE IS DISGRACE TO IRISH, DECLARES WALKER

... the morning round against ... Cowan when the latter fell away from the fast pace he had set on Wednesday, Kerrigan was quick to see his opportunity and after the first four holes had been played in the afternoon there was never a doubt that the cool twenty-two year star and home-bred adept would be the next champion.

Yesterday Cowan failed to get down three foot putts with a regularity that was startlingly disappointing to himself and his host of friends and a few times his foot putts curved by, without even flirting with the cup.

The putter proved mightier than the drive and it was this same club manipulated by the magician Kerrigan which put Cowan on the defensive and ultimately dismayed him.

The most remarkable comeback of any of the top liners was that of George Gordon of the Wannamoisett Country Club of Providence, who got two beautiful rounds of 73 each and brought him into the money awards and also from the thirteenth place of Wednesday to that of third place at the end of 72 holes of play.

Kerrigan was the star of the competition, his opening rounds being a 73, followed by a more brilliant 71 and yesterday's 72 was just perfect golf, and a natural forerunner of his afternoon 69, tieing Cowan for the competitive record of the tournament. Kerrigan's morning card was exactly par of the course, 35 out and 37 in.

Cowan in the morning holed no long putts and the same putter which yesterday was invincible at any distance could not negotiate wee two-footers. His pitch shots were always up, dead in their bite and true to the line, but no matter from what angle he shot, he could not find the elusive hole. His total was 292.

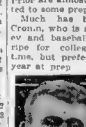
STAR ATHLETES WILL ENTER ANDOVER

Andover Academy will have great sports season if all of ... athletes who plan to enter the famous preschool can meet the entrance requirements.

It is impossible at this time to tell who will be admitted to any school or college. "Tubber" Cronin, Legacy, Art Parisien, Mal McBride and John Prior are almost certain to be admitted to some prep school.

"Tubber" Cronin

Much has been written about Cronin, who is a star football, hockey and baseball player. Cronin is ripe for college athletics at this time, but prefers to spend another year at prep ...



Legacy and Parisien were members of the champion Haverhill High School football team, and Parisien is rated as one of the best quarterbacks going up from the high school ranks.

Art Parisien

Mal McBride holes in the line of Andover's football opponents this Fall. McBride was responsible for Rindge Tech's fine showing last Fall.

The last member of the group is John Prior, hails from Medford and was to Medford high athletics what he above-named boys were to their school teams. Prior played football and baseball with enough skill to win all interscholastic honors in both branches of sport.

Andover expects many more good athletes, but these boys will form a nucleus to build up the best football, hockey and baseball teams in the academy's history.

SUMMERFIELDS WIN, 7-6, FROM P. O. TEAM

In a hotly-contested game at Ronan Park, the Summerfield baseball club nosed out the fast Boston Postoffice M. V. S. by a score of 7 to 6 before one of the largest crowds of the season.

The outstanding feature of the game was the all-round playing of Leroy Roberts, who, besides playing air-tight ball at second, knocked out a single, a double and a home run. His brother, Charles, also had a clean slate in the field and hit safely twice.

Captain Ryan's men have been winning victories over the fastest teams in Greater Boston. This was the second of a three-game series the mail men having won the first 5 to 3.

TENNIS LEADERS IN FEATURE MATCHES FOR LONGWOOD BOWL

TILDEN IS FAVORITE TO LAND TROPHY

By FRED C. LANE.

The possibility of becoming a member of the Davis Cup team and the chance to play in the final rounds for the Longwood Bowl awaits the winner of the Wallace Johnson-R. Norris Williams singles match, slated for this afternoon at the Chestnut Hill courts of the Longwood Cricket Club.

R. Norris Williams.

This match is sure to bring out the best tennis that both these stars have for such an occasion. Johnson, although never a champion, has defeated the foremost players in the net game and, judging from his work on the courts this year, is out to defend the Davis Cup won by the American team last year.

Williams has been a member of the Davis Cup team the past two years and will not lower his standard to the "Flying Philadelphian" without the hardest sort of fight. It promises to be the battle of the tournament, and extra accommodations have been made by the club for the large crowd that is sure to be present.

The general opinion in tennis circles is that Williams will be found off his game for this crucial match, giving Johnson his great opportunity.

Lawrence Rice of Boston and William Tilden of Philadelphia will settle their dispute in the semi-final rounds of the singles matches late this afternoon. Rice has beaten the champion on two occasions, the last at Philadelphia in the Spring.

In winning his way into the semi-final rounds Rice was forced to the limit by his old rival, Nat Miles. Not till forty-nine games had been played was Rice declared a winner.

That old proverb that "youth will be served" proved true in this instance, for Larry pinned a defeat on Niles when not expected. It looked very much like Rice after he had won the opening set on 7-5. Rice played a better net game in the second set and carried off the honors in 6-2.

His in court game showed a marked improvement in this set. Time and again his back hand strokes sent the ball close to the side lines far out of reach of his opponent.

The third set was a rugged see-saw affair.

The strenuous succeeding sets add its telling effects on Niles in the closing rounds, resulting in Rice slipping over two games in a row, giving him the third set in 11-9. The ten-minute rest helped Rice for he final and deciding set which he arried off h. 6-2.

Sidney Beals of Boston was no match for Tilden in the early rounds of the singles. A. H. Chapin, r., of Springfield, was a different proposition playing Dick Williams, putting up a fine opposition in the second and third sets of their match.

Williams won the match in three straight sets of 6-0, 6-2 and 6-2.

Wallace Johnson found John Foster of Boston an easy opponent and won over the Longwood Club member in three sets, 6-1, 6-2 and 6-1.

The California team of Bettens and Fisher was victorious over C. S. Shaw and C. J. Curley in the doubles. The score was 6-4, 6-2, 6-1. C. Wright and R. B. Bidwell won over Lawrence Rice and Nat Niles in two sets, 8-2, 6-2.

One of the best games of the season will take place Sunday afternoon at 4:30 on the Merritt Street playgrounds, Chelsea, when the Rose Croix, K. of C. team will play the fast Millstreams. Both teams have been playing fast ball having defeated some of the best teams in the State. Rose Croix has a heavy hitting club, the majority of their games having been won with the long drives of Kelley, Flynn and Gildea. The "Caseys" have a pitching staff that can compete with any team. Chaquet of Newport, "Matty" Mullen and Kelley take their turns regularly in the box.

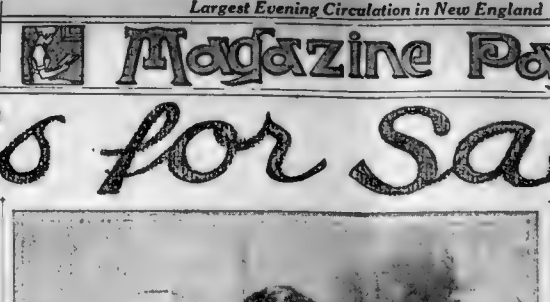
RUPERT HUGHES' GREATEST NOVEL

What Would YOU Do?

IF you were beautiful young Remember Steddon, a Massachusetts minister's daughter, whose sweetheart died before the wedding, would you try to bring up your baby among those who knew you in your own home town? Or would you run away for a fresh start with new surroundings? If you had your living to make, would you try to get into the movies? Dr. Bretherick, the family physician, advised Remember to go West. This she did, writing her parents a fictitious tale of having married and lost her "husband." She falls from a cliff and is told that the accident caused the death of her unborn child. Remember arrives in Los Angeles and determines to "pay the price" for a chance in the movies, but is refused. She is coached by Director Claymore and nearly loses her life in a storm scene. Father Steddon writes a scathing letter. This struggle of a young girl to work out her own salvation is stirringly told in Rupert Hughes' greatest novel. Go on with the story.



"Would you kill any man who put me on a shrine and worshipped me?" Mem asked, teasingly.

JUST now it was Mem's humor to control somebody. She present it. She followed the most loathsome and exasperating of all policies, nonresistence

"You're not going to marry me, Tommy," she said. "I don't want to be one of Solomon's wives."

"Yes. You're wedded already to an army of fans. Half the women in the United States seem to claim you as their spiritual bridegroom. I'd as soon marry a telephone booth or a census report. You make Brigham Young look like a confirmed bachelor; he had only forty wives or so. You have a million."

"They make me tired."

"Maybe, but what wouldn't they do to me? I'd get poisoned candy or infernal machines in the mail. I'd never dare marry you. It would be committing suicide."

She was not altogether without seriousness; she felt a primaval jealousy, a primeval sense of monogamy. She writhed at the thought of possessing only a minute fraction of a universal husband, a syndicated consort; whose portrait on a thousand bureaus inspired numberless strange women with an ardor they called artistic admiration, as the medieval girls and spinsters set up images of saints and made violent love to them under the name of religion, clothing amorous raptures in pious phrases, and burning with desires that they interpreted as heavenly yearnings.

Mem turned green at the thought of a husband whose cold lips she must share with actresses on the scene and whose pictured lips would be kissed good night all around the world.

It was a monstrous fantastic jealousy, but its Symbolism was real. She shuddered at the prospect of being embraced by a husband whose virility thrilled a multitude of anonymous maenads. If all these idiots wrote, how many must there be who worshiped in silence?

But she did not express this revulsion to Tom Holby. She did not really feel enough desire for him just now to be jealous, except with a prophetic remoteness. Just now she was curious about another type of soul, about a comic sprite.

She felt sure that no woman wrote Ned Ling love letters or set him up as an icon on a bureau. Ned Ling's pictures were not sifting around the globe, setting fool girls agiow. Ned Ling's published portraits were always grotesque. He was photographed with a caricatured face of white chalk and a charcoal grimace, with a nonsensical hat and collar becoming almost as familiar now as Charlie Chaplin's neat slovenliness, his mustaches, and his splayfoot shoes.

Surely Ned Ling was free from the amorous bombardment of anonymous love letters. A woman might stand a chance of keeping his heart for her very self, and it would be cheerful to have one's own counsel on the hearth.

Thinking these things, Mem said: "I'd be jealous of your public, Tom. It is a big one and you've got to be true to it. I suppose it's because I've got none of my own. I've hardly had a letter yet."

"That's because your first picture is only being released now. Just wait! You'll be snowed under."

"And would you like it if I read you a letter from some man in Oklahoma who had my picture on his bureau and kissed me every night good night?"

"No."

"Would you be jealous?"

"I bet I'd want to kill him."

"Really" There was a pleasant thrill in this. A thrill that will be a long time dying out of the female soul, the excitement of stirring up battle ardor in two or more males.

Mem went on, teasing, yet ostensibly:

"And would you kill any man who put me on a shrine and worshiped me?"

No. I don't realize that that was part of the penalty of loving a great artist. There's a penalty about loving a stupid woman that nobody else cares for, too. I'd realize that you have a right to the world's love, and I'd be proud of you, however much it hurt. I shouldn't lift my finger to hamper your glory."

She was just about to kiss him lightly on the nearer ear for the fervor of the first part of his speech. But the last line checked her. There can never fail to be a little something disappointing about a love that is willing to share its prey with anyone else—even if it is with everyone else.

Perhaps to punish this sickly saintliness she told him flatly now that she was going to be Ned Ling's leading lady.

This hurt him as much as she hoped.

"It's a come-down for you," he said. "It's a setback. You'd have been the next big star in the emotional field. Now you'll be swallowed up in a comic two-reeler. Ling never gives anybody else any credit in his pictures. All you'll do will be to stand round and feed him."

"Feed him"

"Yes, do things and say things that will give him a funny comeback."

This was a trifle dampening. If he had held to that line of argument he might have turned her aside. But, as always, he had to say too much.

"Besides, as I told you, Ned Ling always makes love to his leading lady. He quarreled with the last one, Miss Clave, because she wanted more publicity. She wanted to get a laugh or two her self and a line or two in the ad vertisements."

This stirred in Mem a double emotion—one of curiosity, one of self-confidence. She had had Ned Ling clinging to her fingers like a baby. She could wrap him round one of them, no doubt. Because Miss Clave failed, that did not prove that a wiser woman would Holby did not quite persuade her to refuse the opportunity with Ling, but he sent her to it with misgivings. He put a fly in the ointment.

A few days later a wasp fell into her ointment. She received one of the first of the numerous letters that were to swarm about her path.

Time in Southern California flew on wings that seemed never to change their plumage. At home in Calverly the birds put on their springtime splendor, lost it, and flew away. The trees feathered out in leaves and in a contrasting glory of blossoms, then lost all. The flower bushes ran the same scale from shabbiness to brief beauty and back again. The very ground was brown, was green, was bad, was white with snow that went and came again.

But Los Angeles was always green. In December, March—always there were great roses glowing, often high up in some trees they had climbed.

Sometimes Mem grew angry at the monotony of beauty. She read of blizzards in the East and North and longed for a frostbite or the nipped cheeks of a Calverly Winter. There was music in her memory of the frozen snow that rang like muffled cymbals under her aching little feet as she ran to school pretending she was a locomotive and her breath the steam.

But this was only the fretfulness of the unconquerable human discontent. She had hated Winter when it tortured her, and now the California paradise tortured her because it was Winterless. Even in heaven the angels grew weary of golden and jasper architecture and harp music and tried to change their government.

Discontent with the weather was only one of Mem's unhappinesses. Her ambition was ruthless and her critical faculty rebuked her. She prayed for opportunities for bigger roles and blushed at her obscurity; yet when she saw her finished scenes she suffered direfully because she had done them so ill. When her colleagues applauded her she said her true thought when she answered: "It could have been done so much better. If only we could retake it."

She was living the artist's life, goaded to expression, rejoicing in utterance and afterward anguished with regret that she had not phrased herself a little differently.

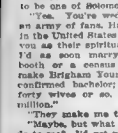
DAILY SHORT STORY—OLD MAN GLOOM

By Lily Wandel



"HERE'S a letter from Flora," remarked Edith in a "here's trouble again" voice.

"Tell it as briefly as possible," nipped Roberta in a pinched voice; she was tired from a long hard day at the office and Flora's letters were not exactly refreshing.

"Her taxes are overdue and the interest on her mortgage is to be paid next week and the grocery bill—"

"I thought we sent her a check for that two weeks ago!"

"Yes, but Flora writes she found another urgent use for the money. She also writes understand asking you to send her your pink hat and parasol. She's invited to a garden party and——

"Oh, if she'd only get married! I'd give her every dress and hat I possess! I'm so tired of saving money up for vacations only to have it go for Flora's grocery bills or her children's doctor bills! Was there ever a young widow like Flora, so absolutely irresponsible and scatter-brained? And all those vague, complicated plans of earning money that never amount to a pin!"

"Well, I wrote her last week just as you told me to, Robby that we simply could not help her with the taxes—she just must get married! Seems she has met a very nice man named Burns, Jerry Burns. Has money and is very attentive, Flora writes."

"Thank goodness! If it only amounts to a wedding real soon! Then maybe her two hard working old maid sisters will have a vacation! Edith, what about our long-planned trip to Jamaica?"

Edith shook her head dismally. "Don't count on it, Robby. Flora will make a mess of things some way. Just see what she writes, 'there's another man calling on me, a Mr. Handon—I call him Charlie—who is very nice, but he's in financial difficulties, and somewhat younger than I and'—

"I interrupted Roberta feverishly, "write her at once to discourage this man—she must marry the Jerry Burns!"

A week later Roberta, with a very long face, wrote out a check for Flora's taxes. "Positively the last check she'll get from me! Here she has a chance to marry a nice man like this Jerry Burns and wasting her time on a good-for-nothing, lazy—"

"Oh, that foolish, stupid woman!" moaned Roberta.

Three days later another note from Flora. "Jerry proposed and I accepted him! He's going to be so good to me—pay all those awful bills and have the house painted and new for Edith, how I hate to tell Charlie! I simply can't! He'll be all broken up! I'm so worried about the poor boy, he's in an awful mess, and don't I, above all, know how that feels! He borrowed some money for some kind of an oil deal and seems the poor boy was swindled and he's in an awful mess!

"If Jerry were only broad-minded enough to help him out of this! Don't be surprised if you hear that I am married real soon, Jerry's very anxious to get settled. He says he won't have Charlie around the place. I'm sorry too, because little Patty likes his stories so much!' etc

"I'll be a much relieved woman when I hear that girl is safely married" sighed Roberta, "and then for our trip, Eddie!"

For a week there was silence, then came a telegram. "We were married this morning.

"FLORA."

"Thank God" murmured Roberta and aliually wept in relief. "Flora is off our hands forever! Edith, where are those steamer lists and plans? Eddie, can you realize it, can you? We are free —we can go to Jamaica—we, two, tired hard-working women!" She actually seized Edith and danced her around the room

When they were at supper talking "Jamaica" and clothes another telegram came. What could that mean? They were almost afraid to open it. Finally Roberta with trembling fingers tore open the yellow envelope. "Forgot to mention that it is Charlie I married—don't be angry with me. I had to marry the man I loved'

"FLORA."

Edith gathered up the steamer sailing lists. "I'm bitterly disappointed, Robby, and now they'll both be on our hands, but I don't blame her for marrying the man she loves!"

"I blame her for marrying a penniless fellow when she is head over heels in debt!" burst forth Roberta angrily. "I'm surprised at you Edith!"

In the morning Roberta was up and dressed when Edith opened her eyes.

A half-hour later at breakfast the mail man brought them a letter from Flora. "Dear girls," read Roberta, "I want you to know how happy Charlie and I are. It's good to marry for love. We decided we'd manage somehow, when suddenly Charlie received the most wonderful news. The oil property wasn't a swindle, after all!

"Imag ne, we have a regular oil field with gushers that literally pour thousands of dollars in our laps while we wait' And because you girls have always been so good to me and because I am so grateful and love you both so dearly, I am inclosing a check from Charlie and me. Buy yourselves a nice roadster or something. Your happy FLORA."

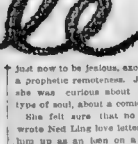
WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

By ANN LISLE

MABEL turned a cooler cream-ier magnolia than ever Charlotta crimsoned, sensing what she's hinted It was too late for Carlotta to explain, retract or do anything to better her matters. But it wasn't too late for Mabel to make them worse!



Carlotta was in her element when she was "mad clear through."

"Oh, we won't always be that," she said far too patly. "The exception proves the rule."

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear—me!" I thought disconsolately, longing to box the ears of my two bad girls. "What would Jim and I do to stop them from talking at each other like this"

A break came just then through Bertha's announcing dinner. But even the delicious meal didn't smooth the rough path. All through dinner it became increasingly plain that I can't do anything to force liking where the ground for it isn't planted. Trouble increased in direct ratio to my efforts to show my fondness for each of the girls They were purnelliously polite to each other. But there was a rapier quality to their words. Each constantly put the other in the wrong. It was as if each was trying to impress on me her readiness to be friendly if only the other would permit it.

These two women have breadth of vision and generosity of soul in common. They ought to be friends.

As I watched the growing antagonism I couldn't stem, my mind rambled off to the field of my own misunderstandings with Virginia. Maybe we also were "obviously" made to be friends. Giving up my useless efforts to patch up matters I began to indulge in my own thoughts And listening idly to their desultory conversation I realized with new force what a breach may come from a "little rift within the lute."

Such a little rift of misunderstanding might even drive Jim and me apart.

"He counts on my friendship with Jeanne. He'd hate to have Rosa know the facts. No matter how much he likes her, she's an outsider not a member of the sacred Harrington clan," I found going through my mind. "Sooner or later, however, Rosa will know the ugly truth—which Jim doesn't seem for a moment suspect. We can't count on many lucky escapes such as we had this afternoon. I must keep Rosa Cordon's visit the shameful fact that Jim's sister doesn't speak to me"

Stubbornly I pretended that I didn't see what I could do. But as we arose to go to the sun-parlor for our coffee I made up my mind to do what I'd been trying to arouse myself out of all through dinner

There was only one way to meet the situation. At the cost of any amount of snubbing I must telephone Virginia and ask her to give me an appointment

Just as I was parting my lips to ask it the telephone rang at the door voice shaking with agitation, cried out:

"Please, Mrs. Harrison, you're wanted at the telephone."

With thudding pulses I started to obey the summons. Something in Bertha's tone alarmed me. As I went down the hall I heard her racing after me. I turned and waited, wondering why she was so agitated by a telephone call.

"It's—I thought you'd want to know—it's Mrs. Dalton," whispered Bertha.

"Thank you," I managed to say composedly

But I went on in a daze of fear. Why should Virginia telephone me? What had happened?

It seemed an eternity before Virginia should telephone me just as I had keyed myself to the point of calling her All I went through in the hall to the "vestary" where Carlotta's telephone is located I found my feet lagging.

Cocoanut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely vegetable), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply put two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water, then moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified

Blood So Thin Could Not Keep Warm Says Wincarnis Helped Him

"The day I first heard of Wincarnis was certainly a lucky one for me," writes Mr. William Field, of 566 West 19th Street, New York. "For months I had been in a terribly weak and run-down condition. I was so weak, in fact, that when on my feet, I always felt as though I was just about to double under me. I was as pale as a ghost. My blood was so thin that no matter how much clothes I would put on I could not seem to be able to keep warm in the cold weather. I could not eat much and what I did eat seemed to do me no good.

No matter what I took I got no better. And I had been that way for so long that I began to think I would never get well again, for I am close on to sixty. But one day a friend who had taken Wincarnis with great benefit after a bad case of the 'Flu' recommended the preparation so emphatically to me that I immediately bought a bottle.

Before I had taken half the bottle, I noticed that at last I had found something that was doing me good. I improved so fast, it was simply marvelous. Less than three bottles of Wincarnis have made me feel like a new man. Wincarnis is certainly a wonderful tonic and I hope you can manage to get everybody to know of it."

An Ancient Perfume

It seems strange today to read of saffron as a perfume. One romance about it lies in the story by Hakluyt of a pilgrim smuggling, at the risk of his life, from the Levant a head of saffron in a hollow made in his staff.

Landru—His Secret Love Affairs

First Authentic Story of French Bluebeard, Who Won 283 Women, Written By William Le Queux

By WILLIAM LE QUEUX
(Former Criminologist and Author of "The Fifth Finger," "The Four Faces," "Tracked by Wireless," etc.

CHAPTER V.

A Peep Into Bluebeard's Chamber.

WHENEVER the amazing criminal Landru felt himself treading upon thin ice, he acted with a bold audaciousness quite inconceivable. If danger threatened, he became calm, affecting an injured innocence so completely genuine as to at once disarm suspicion. His ability to act as though in perfect good faith and honesty carried him across many a pitfall into which a less able criminal would undoubtedly have fallen.

The day following the receipt of Monsieur Friedmann's letter, he called upon his victim's brother-in-law, expressing his extreme regret that he had been absent on business in Lyons—from which city, be it remembered, he wrote to the police at Mantes—and had only just returned.

Monsieur Friedman was in anything but an amiable mood. His wife had long ago denounced Landru as an "escroc," and had urged her sister to leave him. Landru knew that, and at once pointed out the fact to Monsieur Friedmann.

"I certainly do not like the tone of your letter," he told him frankly. "Madame Cuchet and Andre have gone to London, probably influenced by your wife. She has left me, and I am deserted and desolate. And yet you seem to insinuate that I am a swindler! You speak of the motor licenses your wife found. Certainly, I deal in motor-cars, and many licenses pass through my hands. Surely you have known that fact."

"But the women's clothes?" asked Monsieur Friedmann.

"Oh! I have lots. I often buy the household goods of women, and frequently have boxes of clothing. Every dealer has," laughed Landru.

"And the identifica..ion papers of women? These were five in the trunk my wife examined, and some letters. She showed them to Madame Cuchet."

"Oh! I'm so glad she did," said Landru, quite unperturbed. "Women's papers often fall into my hands, because, sometimes, when a woman sells all her belongings, she does so with an intention of effacing her identity. It is done in Paris daily. It is quite easy, as you know, to get fresh identity papers—and you know the ropes."

"Well, I am not at all satisfied," declared Monsieur Friedmann, whom I later interviewed, and learned of this conversation. "If Madame Cuchet had gone to London she would certainly have written to her sister."

"No, I don't think she would," declared the clever criminal. "You do not know the secret that I learnt only ten days before she left me—that she was an agent of the contre-espionage department of the Ministry of War. She told me so in strictest confidence—and I now only betray it because of your allegations against me. I tell you that Madame Cuchet and her son have gone to London as secret agents, at the orders of the Ministry, in order to follow a woman spy who left Paris for London. It is because of that I am confident of their return."

This statement appealed to Monsieur Friedmann. He confessed to me that Landru, though suspected from the very beginning, cleverly adopted such an attitude of injured innocence that eventually he withdrew his threat, and begged forgiveness from him for having written that letter.

Landru departed in high spirits.

Next day he motored to Mantes, where he called at the Bureau of Police, apologized for the "error," and asked if they desired to question him further regarding the smoke from his chimney of which his neighbors complained.

Again the great criminal by his frankness and good humor, disarmed suspicion, and later he spent an hour or so at "The Lodge," at Vernouillet, of which he had kept the key. The scene of his crimes, as he walked through the small rooms, was stuffy and unwholesome. On the dining-room table there still stood a vase of brown, faded flowers.

But he cleared them off with a hard, discordant laugh, and, taking them into the garden, flung them into the ashpit.

Then he went all around the house, busily placing it in order, removing the dust with an old towel which he took from the kitchen. He was preparing the House of Death to receive yet another victim!

He worked at cleaning up the place till dusk, and then, racing back to Neuilly in his car, he spent the night quietly with his wife and family.

For four days he remained with them, his fiendish plotting. Then, telling Madame Landru that he was compelled to travel on business to Biarritz, he left and returned to the "nest of love," murder again written in his heart.

The police who patrolled the little town of Vernouillet, under the police of Mantes, were quite satisfied with his explanations regarding the smoke, therefore, the way was open for the middle-aged South American widow, Madame Labord-Line, or "Dresil," as he termed her in his famous notebook.

A week after his return to "The Lodge," he called upon her in his car and took her motoring out to Fontainebleau, where they lunched at the Hotel de France, and then strolled into the historic Palace, to a dealer at Batignolles. The day after, he invited her out to spend the week-end in his little trou at Vernouillet. The day was the 15th of June. On the 16th there remained no trace of her, and none has ever been discovered. But it was proved that his profit was about 87 pounds—a paltry sum, surely, for a woman's life!

As I study the mass of reports in these formidable dossiers, which would take months to read every word, I have come to the conclusion that he was rather taken by the South American widow. By some means she had attracted him, for he had kept in touch with her for an unusually long space of time.

Briefly I tell my readers, without fear of contradiction, for my assertion is supported by facts which came to the knowledge of the Surete after the trial at Versailles, that on the very night Mme. Labord-Line stepped from the arch-assassin's car in the narrow street of Vernouillet, she fell dead in that same little sulle-a-manger in which Mme. Cuchet and her son had writhed in their death agonies. Landru used the same poison as before, and at 3 o'clock that morning he placed the body of his victim in the swiftrunning Oise River, whence nearly a year afterwards the remains were recovered five miles away and buried as a person unknown.

At the trial the disappearance of this lady was never cleared up to the satisfaction of the court. There were many conflicting statements, but the fact, nevertheless, remained—a fact we now know—that Landru, having sold her possessions, kept her papers of identity among his effects. Why, nobody can tell.

But while Landru was toying with the affections of the South American lady, he had been making ardent pretence of love for a certain elderly but low-bred woman called Guillin.

Landru, though threatened by M. Friedmann and suspected by the police, was utterly defiant, for he had put in one of the Paris daily journals an advertisement which read:

"SINGLE gentleman, aged forty-five, possessed of an income of 400 pounds a year, desires to marry a quiet and homely lady with corresponding income."

Mme. Guillin, who answered this advertisement, was over fifty, short, stout, and not over prepossessing. But she possessed 800 pounds, which had been left her by a family at Melun, in which she had been for many years housekeeper.

After the date mentioned, when Madame Guillin locked up her flat at 35, Rue Crozatier, and went by train to Vernouillet, she was never again seen.

From the drama that was enacted at the House of Death I am now able to lift the veil. On the evening of Madame's arrival the pair dined together, and afterwards sat in the garden.

"Have you no servants here?" she asked presently, rather surprised.

"Yes, I have a very excellent woman—Madame Bricourt," was his reply. "Her son was unfortunately wounded a week ago, and she has gone to the military hospital at Nouan to see him. I fear she will not be back for a couple of days. So we must get on as best we can without her—eh? She lives with her brother just at the end of the road."

With that explanation the woman was quite satisfied. Landru was in no way impatient to obtain the woman's money, for he knew that it was already within his grasp. The crime was, however, precipitated by an incident which occurred on the following afternoon.

While her fiance was out posting a letter to another woman he had recently marked down as a victim, Madame Guillin, on going over the villa, came upon a locked attic. She had the curiosity to peer through the keyhole, and, a stray bar of sunshine lighting up the place, as it did only for half an hour each day, she saw within a quantity of women's clothing, lingerie and shoes.

They were relics of her predecessors.

Much surprised, she naturally demanded of Landru to whom the garments belonged, whereupon the criminal, quite unperturbed, sighed, and apparently much moved, replied:

"Ah! my dear one. These clothes belonged to my mother. I go to that room very often to weep. I keep them in memory of her."

Truly a fine opening. "Bluebeard" could, on the discovery of his "cupboard," effect a deep and touching sentiment, for so grave was he and betrayed such emotion that his latest victim held him in higher esteem than ever.

THE STORY SO FAR

Landru's early life is described by M. Le Queux in the opening chapter of his story of the world's greatest love criminal. After years of petty swindling he turned his attention to victimizing women, making love to them, getting control of their property, and then killing them. Mme. Cuchet was one of the first. Landru poisoned her and her son Andre in a villa rented with her money and burned their bodies in a furnace. He then made love to Mme. Labord-Line, meanwhile the police investigated his activities at the villa and he shrewdly played for time, going to Lyons and notifying them he would have to be gone a week or more. Meanwhile he made love to several other women, including Nina Langlois, to whom he wrote affectionately.

William Le Queux, the famous criminologist, at Landru's death cottage at Gambais, running down clews of some of his murders.

Life Career of the World's Greatest Love Criminal, as Shown by the Archives of the Paris Police

It was not much, but it was much more than Landru had previously made out of his heartless and well-planned crimes. They met, and Mme. Guillin was quickly conquered by his sweet and highly-refined attitude.

The first meeting took place in Mme. Guillin's flat in the Rue Crozatier, and next day Madame called at Bluebeard's cosy apartment in the Rue des Petis-Champs, where the dastardly trap had already been laid. In his notebook, in which he recorded so many facts and every contime of his daily expenses, he called her "Crozatier," just as he called Mme. Labord-Line "Dresil."

The man who was already planning yet another crime told her that he had received high honors for his services against the enemy in the North of France, and had been appointed French Consul in Australia, to which country he was shortly going. The prospects he held out to this woman of humble origin were highly alluring, and it was surprising that she soon became his "fiancee." Hence, after his affair with Mme. Labord-Line had run its course, he had already another in hand! Mme. Guillin was charmed with him, and on a visit to Melun, a few miles out of Paris, she told her friends of the great happiness that had come to her, of her proposed voyage to Australia as the Consul's wife, and of the exquisite charm of the man who had proposed marriage to her.

Now the woman was aged fifty-two, and distinctly common type; therefore all Landru's fables appealed to her. She admired his motor car—the same car that he had used to dispose of his previous victims—and when he took her to Vernouillet, where fresh flowers adorned the small rooms, she was charmed with the place.

"Why not spend a week or so here?" he suggested in his soft, insinuating way. "It is hot in Paris in these days, and, besides, we never have air-raids!"

She accepted the invitation, and a few days later—on August 2nd, 1915, to be precise—she arrived in Vernouillet with a large brown trunk. Because Landru was pretending to make arrangements for his departure to Australia, she had purchased the trunk, second-hand, at her lover's suggestion.

THOSE WHO HAVE LUCK

By Beatrice Fairfax

"YOU have all the luck!" sighed Jacqueline as Anna told of her project for a month's vacation in the Canadian Rockies. "You certainly stand in right with your grandmother."

But I knew how much Jacqueline has done, gladly and loyally and without thought of reward for the grandmother who is treating her to this wonderful vacation month.

"You have all the luck!" scoffed Peter as Jim spoke of the wonderful new position he had just acquired. "I wish I was with an organization that hands out plums like managing editorships of newspapers in fine, growing towns."

But I happen to know how hard Peter has worked selling advertising for his paper, and how careless he has been about "overtime" and how sincere he has been about giving the best he can to the organization which is now recognizing him with a splendid new job.

Luck is the name given by the envious or the lazy or the dull to the results of honest effort on the part of someone else.

Luck is the thing that happens to someone else—and you'd love to have occur to you.

But luck — like about everything else in the world—is seventy-five per cent. regard of—and reward for merit.

There are folks who are called "lucky dogs" because about everything they touch seems to come out well. But in most cases—they know what it is they're touching and they put a lot of honest push behind the touch!

The seemingly lucky gamblers whose investments generally succeed, is probably a man who has learned a lot about the thing into which he is putting his money or who has won the confidence of the big men back of the movement into which he is investing. And when he loses he has the poise and the sanity to remain calm, believing in his power to recoup one loss—or a dozen.

Almost nothing comes to us mortals save as we earn it.

Practically our whole existence is ours to make or to mar—according to how straight we think and how hard we work to put our thoughts into action.

"I've said over and over again—and indeed I firmly believe—that we get what we want in this world if we want it enough to earn it.

"You can't cure a sore throat with chocolate caramels."

Nor can you invite fortune by strumming a guitar aimlessly. But you may bring success your way by playing that guitar splendidly—and you may come to fame by making those chocolate caramels so well that every one will want to buy them.

"Use Sylpho-Nathol in the Bathroom"

"Bob says that I'm the best housekeeper in New England. That's not true, of course,—but I am sure there isn't a more particular one in the world. Imagine how I felt when my spic-and-span little bathroom developed an odor which we couldn't get rid of.

"It wasn't really objectionable, but it was always noticeable. We had the plumbing inspected. There was nothing wrong with it. I scrubbed and scrubbed and scrubbed. I used ammonia and lye and all the home-tried compounds—everything I could think of. It didn't do a bit of good. I was simply miserable.

"Bob came in with a grin one evening. 'Trust mere man sometimes,' he said—'I think we've found the remedy for the bathroom.' We had. Bob had brought home our first bottle of Sylpho-Nathol.

"I wouldn't have thought it possible that anything as easy to use could make that room fresh and sweet again in such a short time. It was almost miraculous. I wouldn't be without Sylpho-Nathol for anything. And I have found so many other necessary uses for it—it has freshened up the whole house."

For many years, thousands of thorough New England housekeepers have used Sylpho-Nathol day in, day out.

In mop-water, it assures the cleanliness that keeps families healthy. It is a necessary safeguard for sinks and drains; for damp, musty, hard-to-get-at places; for cellars; for fly-breeding garbage receptacles. And, of course, it should be used regularly around the bathroom fixtures—and as a flush for the closet bowl.

Sylpho-Nathol is 4½ times stronger than carbolic acid—yet is so safe to have in the house as a case of scouring soap. It cannot hurt your skin. It comes in four handy sizes, 15c, 35c, 65c, $1.25. Most good grocers and druggists have it. If yours hasn't, he can get it. Just ask for it by the name "Sylpho-Nathol."

RHYMING OPTIMIST

—By Aline Michaelis—

SOMETIMES I rise to greet gray skies and many cares set me? I cry; "Alack! Things look so black, I guess my jinx will get me!" When I awake, my bones all ache, my gouty toe is throbbing; collectors roar at my front door until I'm nearly sobbing. On days like these I wish some breeze would blow me in the ocean or carry me to Yangtse-se, away from bills and Goshen. What do I do to pull me through when days are far from sunny? I laugh at jokes of foolish folks, at antics rude and funny. I leave the woes of gouty toes to folk less literary, the while I read each comic screed with heart that's blithe and merry. I fill each ear with words of cheer and speak of good times coming; then hasts away to dig all day, while joyous tunes I'm humming. The clouds of dawn have wholly gone and everything looks jolly; the mirthful muse has banished blues and mastered melancholy. So every day I leave the hay and grind the funny paper; before
I eat I get that sheet and con each comic caper. I laugh, "Ho-ho!" till big tears flow, my mirth awakes the neighbors; gloom goes ker flop while buttons pop, with joy I start my labors.

Washington's English Home

Sulgrave Manor in Northamptonshire, the ancestral home of the Washingtons in "the spacious times of great Elizabeth," is an English shrine that will probably attract American tourists during the coming season even more than Shakespeare's birthplace or the cottage of Ann Hathaway. Extensive repairs and alterations have restored the place as nearly as possible to the condition in which it stood when it was occupied by Lawrence Washington, Mayor of Northampton, who bought the estate in 1539, during the reign of Henry VIII., and recently it has been opened to the public.

Lawrence Washington paid a few hundred pounds for the estate; but as the property now stands it includes a considerable addition made after the Washingtons had disposed of the property.

The main work of restoration consisted in removing modern additions, in replacing missing wood work and in trying to choose furniture such as the Washington family had when they lived there. In 1914 the British American Peace Centenary Committee bought the property, which will be preserved as a shrine.

Fresh From Paris—Latest From Marie Suzanne

Paris, France.

A PROMINENT French woman attended the races in a striking Callot frock made of black satin embroidered in gold and colors, and trimmed with white satin embroidered in gold. The metals, in both fabric and trimming, are claiming a large share of attention in Paris. Over this was worn a cape of black crepe satin with intercut centred in the deep, vivid blue silk fringe that reached the floor.

YELLOW is one of the season's most favored colors, and the straight Jenny frock of yellow crepe Georgette, with its interestingly shaped sleeves, sketched above, is trimmed with narrow gold and yellow galon. The slip beneath it is of white crepe de chine and the flowers at the girdle are red and yellow.

Household Hints

Before washing any new article, steep for half an hour in clean, cold water, in which has been dissolved a handful of salt to the pail of water—one tablespoonful of vinegar also, for colored articles. This helps to fix the color. This applies especially to big things, such as blankets, counterpanes, lace curtains, etc., as treated in this way they do not "kill" the suds when put in the washing water. Hence there is a great saving of soap and labor.

Potato pastry is excellent for pies to be eaten hot, but they should be made in rather small dishes, as this pastry is a little delicate to handle in large portions. To make it, take equal quantities of nicely boiled potatoes and self-raising flour, and rub them well together; add a little salt, and blend with milk or milk and water. Roll in the usual way, and bake the pies at once.

The correct way to mend a sheet is to lay the patch on the outside and tuck it on perfectly straight, then sew it neatly round the four sides. Next turn the sheet over and cut out all the thin part to within an inch of the seam; turn the edges neatly down and fell them to the patch.

ADVICE TO LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

The Test of Love.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

At a party about two months ago, I met a young chap who attracted my fancy. Since that time we have gone out together to various places an dI have learned to care a great deal about him.

I am twenty and fond of excitement and pleasure. I have many boy friends who want to take me out, but as this one loves me, he has asked me to give up my other friends.

Although he has told me he loves me but has not given me a ring, do you think he is entitled to ask that of me? I am willing to do so, but should things turn out differently than I expect, I would be at a loss for friends. C. L. B.

WHEN a man of character tells a girl that he loves her he is likely to give her some idea whether he hopes to marry her or not. Don't sacrifice a worthwhile love for the sake of your fondness for good times and excitement. You won't grow or improve by rushing around from party to party. But to give up all your friends for the sake of one who is exacting and jealous is not fair either. Possibly this man merely wishes to keep you from rushing around and getting yourself talked about. You ought to be able to talk frankly with him since he has felt in a position to declare his love for you.

Anxious to Obey.

The editor was frightfully busy and he could not see any one. When an old friend sent up his card he sighed, but decided not to see him. He called in the office boy. "Look here," he said, "you must tell this gentleman I'm out. I can't see him and I wouldn't offend him for the world. So be sure to convince him that I really am out, you know?"

"Yes, sir," said the boy. Then after a pause —"Don't you think I should be more likely to convince him you were out, sir, if I went to him smoking one of your best cigars?"

'MERE PRINCE' RILES WIDOW OF HAMMERSTEIN

New York, July 21.—What is one prince more or less between ladies? Mrs. Oscar Hammerstein insisted today that she is through with Prince Oleg Radimir, to whom she had announced her engagement, in letters to Miss J. E. Allen, an operatic agent, the prince had denied the engagement.

"If he wrote those letters I never want to see his face again," declared Mrs. Hammerstein. "I called Miss Allen on the telephone and asked if she would allow me to see them and she said she would not. What I'd like to know is, if Miss Allen cared so much for the prince, why she didn't help him when he was out of work and hungry."

Aside from this, Mrs. Hammerstein has weaned of the affairs of fair, she said. It begins to nauseate her, as she expressed it.

"Besides," she added, "there is a multi-millionaire banker waiting down stairs now to take me riding in his Rolls Royce. Why, may I inquire, should I be disturbed about a mere prince?"

TRAIN WHEELS KILL ROSLINDALE GIRL

Miss Anita Strithall of Roslindale, who fell beneath the wheels of a Boston & Maine train while chasing her hat on the platform of the Lynn railroad station, died at the Lynn Hospital a few hours after the accident. The girl, who lived at No. 26 Wiggin street, Roslindale, slipped and fell while trying to catch her hat, which had blown from her head by a gust of wind. Several hundred people witnessed the accident.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC UTILITIES

Boston, July 10, 1922.

TRANSPORTATION FACILITIES WITHIN THE METROPOLITAN DISTRICT

Chapter 46 of the Resolves of the General Court of 1922 reads as follows:

"RESOLVE PROVIDING FOR AN INVESTIGATION BY THE DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC UTILITIES OF TRANSPORTATION FACILITIES WITHIN THE METROPOLITAN DISTRICT.

Resolved, That the department of public utilities is hereby ordered to investigate the following described matters relative to transportation facilities within the metropolitan district:

(1) Whether the department of public utilities should extend the jurisdiction and powers directed to investigate the following described matters relative to transportation facilities within the metropolitan district:

(1) Better transportation facilities between the city of Boston and the towns of Chelsea, Revere, Everett and Malden, including the subject-matter of House 46, and that part of House 1060 relative thereto.

(2) Better transportation facilities between the West Roxbury and Hyde Park districts of the city of Boston and the city proper, including the subject-matter of that part of House 1060 relative thereto.

(3) The extension of rapid transit facilities in the Dorchester district of the city of Boston as proposed in House 1766, and Senate 344 giving a revised estimate of the cost of the work, together with the cost of all alterations in existing facilities which would be required, and considering the method of financing the undertaking and, among other questions, the advisability of the purchase by the city of Boston of existing lines and the leasing of the same on terms to cover expenses and interest and sinking fund (railway lease); the advisability of equipment of the proposed extension and city; and if equipped by said city on what terms the equipment should be financed and the equipment leased; whether it said rapid transit facilities are extended to the city line or under the subway now in process of construction in Dorchester; and if not, whether the same should be extended to the Milton line.

(4) The extension of rapid transit facilities in the Roslindale district as proposed in House 1766, and Senate 344 giving a revised estimate of the cost of the work, together with the cost of all alterations in existing facilities which would be required, and considering the method of financing the undertaking and, among other questions, the advisability of the purchase by the city of Boston of existing lines and the leasing of the same on terms to cover expenses and interest and sinking fund (railway lease); the advisability of equipment of the proposed extension and city; and if equipped by said city on what terms the equipment should be financed and the equipment leased; whether it said rapid transit facilities are extended to the city line or under the subway now in process of construction in Roslindale; and if not, whether the same should be extended to the Hyde Park line.

(5) Better transportation facilities between the city of Boston and the towns of Watertown, Belmont, Arlington, Lexington, Waltham, Newton, Wellesley, Weston and Needham, including the subject-matter of House 46, and that part of House 1060 relative thereto.

(6) Better transportation facilities between the West Roxbury and Hyde Park districts of the city of Boston and the city proper, including the subject-matter of that part of House 1060 relative thereto.

(7) The extension of rapid transit facilities in the Dorchester district of the city of Boston as proposed in House 1766, and Senate 344 giving a revised estimate of the cost of the work, together with the cost of all alterations in existing facilities which would be required, and considering the method of financing the undertaking and, among other questions, the advisability of the purchase by the city of Boston of existing lines and the leasing of the same on terms to cover expenses and interest and sinking fund (railway lease); the advisability of equipment of the proposed extension and city; and if equipped by said city on what terms the equipment should be financed and the equipment leased; whether it said rapid transit facilities are extended to the city line or under the subway now in process of construction in Dorchester; and if not, whether the same should be extended to the Milton line.

The department shall investigate transportation service and facilities within the metropolitan district and such other facts and matters as it may deem necessary. The department shall, for the co-ordination of transportation upon highways, waterways, railroads and street railways, shall, if any, make such estimates of costs as may be needed for its investigations and reports and may employ such assistants therefor as it deems necessary, and other departments and boards of the commonwealth and the street commissioners of the several cities and towns affected by said investigation shall furnish all facts and information requested within their knowledge or control.

The transit department of the city of Boston and the trustees of the Boston Elevated Railway Company are hereby directed to furnish to the department with such information in their possession bearing on the subject-matter of the investigation as the department may request.

The department shall report the results of its investigations and its recommendations on the above matters to the general court not later than the first Wednesday in January, nineteen hundred and twenty-three, together with estimates of the cost of any work recommended, recommendations as to how the cost should be met and drafts of legislation recommended.

Pending the filing with the report of the department and acting thereon by the general court, the construction of section two of the Revised Laws, chapter 112, section 261 of the Special Acts of nineteen hundred and seventeen relative to the construction of a tunnel in the city of Everett by the Boston Elevated Railway Company shall be suspended. (Approved June 13, 1922.)

Upon the foregoing resolve the Commission of the Department of Public Utilities will hold a hearing at the office of the department, 80 State House, Boston, on WEDNESDAY, JULY 26, 1922, at 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon.

By order of the Commission,

ANDREW A. HIGHLANDS, Secretary.

Railroad Consolidation

Its History in New England Shows Little Gain for the Public

We express our sympathy with the views expressed by President Percy E. Todd of the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad, who appeared before the Special Maine Commission appointed by the government to investigate the proposed railroad consolidation.

Mr. Todd opposed the consolidation upon the ground that the Bangor & Aroostook would receive very little consideration at the hands of the big lines in which it was merged.

Indeed it would not. The history of railroad consolidation in New England has been a bad one. The public has gained little and lost much, and the stockholders, except the big insiders, have nearly always been the losers.

Public Ownership

This Letter on Seattle's Street Railway Should Be Read With Care

The following is a letter written to the Boston Herald in reply to a criticism of public ownership and operation of the public utilities, particularly of the street railways:

To the Editor of the Herald:

In a recent editorial on "Detroit's Street Railway Venture," you make unfavorable reference to Seattle's municipally-owned street railway system. The impression this editorial conveys is that our street railway system, with a 10-cent fare in effect, shows a deficit of $2,000,000 per annum.

I am confident that it is not your policy wilfully to misstate facts, especially when such misstatement has the effect of unfavorably influencing the financial and bond-buying portion of your great metropolis in its rating of the city of Seattle.

Representatives of the bond houses of New York city have given assurance that the New York public has been misinformed, through the columns of the press, regarding the aims and management of municipally-owned-and-operated utilities in the city of Seattle, which has had the effect of unfavorably reflecting upon the credit of this city, of which both officials and public are very jealous and zealously seek to protect.

I trust, therefore, that you will give space in the Herald to the following facts and figures relating to our municipally-owned utilities:

The city of Seattle acquired the street railway system formerly owned by the Puget Sound Traction, Light & Power Company, April 1, 1919, at a cost of $75,757.80 per mile, or a total cost of $15,000,000 payable principal and interest out of earnings, at the rate of $833,000 per year, commencing three years after date of purchase; final payment, in 1933, to be $839,000.

From April 1, 1919, to July 24, 1920, the city operated on a 5-cent fare, while in other western cities fares were 8 cents and more. During this time there accrued a deficit of $1,376,215.68.

On July 24, 1920, the fare was increased to 6¼ cents, with the result that at the end of 1920 the deficit was increased from $1,376,215.68 to $1,814,163.34.

At the end of the year 1920 the fare was again increased to 8 1-3 cents, effective January 9, 1921, with the result that in 1921 the street railway system showed a net profit of $226,788.29.

Since January 1, 1922, owing to reductions in payroll and material costs and saving resulting from the change from a two-man to a one-man car operating plan, the net saving has averaged over $48,000 a month, which will mean a net profit for 1922 of nearly $600,000.

It has been claimed that the fare in Seattle is 10 cents. This is true only where the car rider fails to take advantage of the opportunity to purchase 8 1-3-cent tokens. The 10-cent fares collected amount to about 8 per cent. of the total. School children ride for 2½ cents.

The proposed 3-cent fare measure was defeated at the last election by a vote of about 3 to 1.

The city owns and operates a light and power system which produced a net profit of $952,987.82 during 1921, and in spite of the fact that wages paid to light employes are above the average paid for similar work throughout the United States, rates for residence purposes are 6 cents per kilowatt hour up to 45 kilowatt hours per month and 2½ cents per kilowatt hour for all current used in excess of 45 kilowatt hours; for business lighting purposes, 5½ cents per kilowatt hour for all up to 100 kilowatt hours per month and 1¼ cents for all in excess of 100 kilowatt hours; for current used for power purposes, 4 cents per kilowatt hour for the first 100 kilowatt hours used per month and 1 cent per kilowatt hour for all over 100 kilowatt hours; for current used for industrial purposes the rate for peak hours is the same as for commercial purposes, and for off-peak hours, between 4:30 p. m. and 9:30 a. m., there is a reduction of 25 per cent. on all loads of 21-horsepower or over.

The city's water plant, also municipally owned and operated, produced a net profit of approximately $400,000 in 1921.

Water rates are 50 cents for 500 cubic feet, 3,750 gallons, and 6 cents per 100 cubic feet for all above that, with a special rate of 4 cents per 100 cubic feet for water used for industrial purposes. I believe that there are only two cities in the United States that have a lower water rate than this.

(Signed) H. W. CARROLL,
Comptroller, City of Seattle.

Seattle, Wash., June 7, 1922.

As usual, the advocates of the continuance of private mismanagement take good care never to tell all the facts concerning an example which they cite, and by suppression of important facts they "twist the true cause the false way." This Herald editorial was seen by the Comptroller of the city of Seattle, the financial head of the city, and he has replied to the Herald because, as he says, there is an organized campaign going on among the newspapers throughout the country to discredit Seattle's public ownership and operation enterprise.

We publish the letter, and invite our readers to consider it very carefully and to invite those who intend to go into politics or who are already in politics and who want to be informed, to read it with extra care.

Taxing Coal

Has Given Pleasure

Editor Boston American:

I am interested in the Arbuckle matter, and from the time it began until now it has been an eye-opener. The human nature contains many surprises and that case has brought out many of the least desirable traits.

In my opinion, all things considered, Arbuckle has been a boy offender compared with the unworthy motives, despicable cowardice and general characteristics exhibited by others connected with the case in its entirety.

Without intention or warning, Arbuckle found himself in serious trouble, which is the way that horror generally arrives, and none of us know when it may land. I read the newspaper accounts of the affair, have as much knowledge as any of the public about what happened and I think the worst crime of the whole thing was that of attempting to make a criminal of a man like Arbuckle, who has given an inestimable amount of pleasure to people all over the world.

COMMON SENSE FAN.

Publicity Only Way

Editor Boston American:

I personally wish to see the Fatty Arbuckle films and practically all of my friends say the same, but I don't think it should be necessary for us to write to the editor of a newspaper in order to get them.

We understand that we all appreciate immensely your sense of fair play in opening a subject which has been so abused by every one connected with it. This publicity is probably the only way to get results, but most of us don't like to write letters on such subjects. Where Arbuckle's right to continue his work and our right to enjoy it is as evident, it is exasperating to have a man like Hays cause all this delay.

Driven From Home

Editor Boston American:

To give D. M. Stuart an idea of the wholesale victimization of Belfast Catholics, simply because they are Catholics. On one day alone, May 30th, the following Catholic families were chased from their homes: Portnell street 6, Marzville street 13, Hardcastle street 6, Woodford street 14, Lower Canning street 3, Lower California street 13, Peter place 14, Norfolk street 3, Cooper street 3, Grosvenor place 3, Grosvenor road 11. On July 19th 39 families were hunted out of Mountoliver street and 42 families out of Leopold street. On May 20th 150 families were chased out of Milwater street, Gerrygannon and Weaver street, (where the children were bombed), and North Derby street. Now, Mr. Stuart, do you approve of these outrages? Is this what keeps William's present day followers celebrating his glorious memory? No, Mr. Stuart, these are the men who refused to fill the ranks of the Ulster division who fought so gallantly at Thiepval. The youth of Ulster looked on while the ranks of their division were filled by outsiders.

Southern Irishmen, Scotchmen and Englishmen were drafted in against the wish of the survivors of the gallant Ulster division who fought so well at Thiepval, because the loyal Orangemen of Ulster would not reinforce and keep up one division. These gallant die-hards are now masters of Belfast, as most of the Catholic men are driven out, or are in prison, or hospitals, but they can still murder, beat and turn out the women and children as their glorious ancestors did under William, Prince of Orange.

CLINGING VINE NATURE'S USELESS PRODUCT

By Winifred Black

TWO beautiful women, both rich and both titled, killed themselves the other day in an old palace in Italy.

They were sisters and they died because they could not live without their mother who died not long ago.

What devotion—what sensitive love! But still—I don't know whether those suicides were such a tribute to the poor woman who is gone or not.

What is the best thing a mother can do for her children? Bind them to her so closely that they cannot live when she is gone, or teach them to stand upon their own feet like brave, self-reliant human beings, and live courageously and honorably, even though they have to live alone and in poverty or even in illness?

I knew a girl once who could not stay in boarding school.

She had the next room to mine and I used to hear her crying night after night. In the daytime she could not eat, and she wouldn't talk with any of the girls or read or do anything but cry.

She was homesick, she said, and finally her mother came and took her home.

And afterward she married, and her husband took her to live in a distant city, but she would not stay there. She was homesick, she said, and back she went with her little boy—home to her mother.

And her husband could not leave his business and come with her, and so he saw her only once or twice a year, and she was virtually a widow.

This woman's mother grieved a great deal about this strange situation. She knew there was something wrong somewhere, but she made the best of it, kept her daughter with her, helped bring up the little grandchild and was always sorry for the husband, who tried so hard to make his wife happy in the city where his business was.

And finally the mother died. What did the daughter do then?

Die, too?

Not at all! She lived and was a good mother to her own little boy, but she sent him away to school, very early in life because she did not want him to become so deeply attached to her and her home.

Her husband divorced her, I think, and married again, although there never was any trouble between them except his wife's "homesickness" for her mother and her old home.

I have known mothers to grieve themselves almost to death when their daughters married, and I know a mother today who thinks she is going to die because her son wants to marry.

No, there is nothing wrong with the girl and mother-love with the son. The mother is simply a jealous, exacting woman, and every time I see the way she acts when her son dares to invite his sweetheart to go for a spin and does not take his mother along, too, I do not wonder that the boy's father died when he was a young man.

Vampire—that's what a woman is who clings like that either to her children or to her husband or to anyone else on earth!

When you come right down to facts, the only person who's worth the paring of a fingernail is the man or woman who can live alone and be comparatively happy if that seems to be the best way.

If I were the girl who is engaged to the young man with the vampire mother, I am afraid I'd want to have husband set up in business in some other town before I promised seriously to marry him.

If This Is Your Birthday

You Are LUCKY

YOUR mind is pre-eminently logical if today is your birthday, and you may expect a life of even uneventfulness, not that you will not achieve a distinguished success in whatever you undertake, but whatever you do achieve will be by slow and careful steps rather than by a brilliant triumph.

Today is one of extremely doubtful omen. Carry on your routine, but undertake no new projects.

The ensuing year will be one in which you will be tempted to make drastic changes in your personal and occupational connections. You should observe caution in arriving at any decisions.

ARE YOU SOCIALLY SELFISH?

If you invite a man to call on you when he is in the city, give him more than a greeting and a farewell.

You may be busy when he calls, but you surely have some leisure time after working hours, time to do something to entertain.

The man who accepts your invitation to call on you believed you were sincere when you extended the invitation.

He invited you to his home and meant it, and thinks you, too, are honest in your friendly words of invitation.

Much disappointment is caused by the cool welcome the man from the small town receives from those whom he has entertained royally, perhaps, in his own small town.

He calls you his city friend.

Do not make the term "city friend" a term of reproach.

Undoubtedly the man from the rural districts has more time which he can call his own and use to make life pleasanter for those who come to see him than has the man who works in the city.

But if you have no time to help others to a good time, do not impose on others and accept something you cannot return in unselfishness.

SEEN AND HEARD

HIGHLY colored tennis courts may yet be the vogue, according to ERNST HERMANN, director of the Newton playgrounds, who plans to find out which would be the most restful to the players' eyes. Under his direction a court of dark brown is being laid at the Burr playground to replace a pitch of gray gravel. His next experiment will be with clay, dyed green, he says.

The scene was a Waltham restaurant. A fussy lady of the old maid type was studying the menu; a waiter with boredom written over his countenance was awaiting her order. "Is your tea freshly brewed?" she asked. "Yes, ma'am," was the ready answer. Several seconds elapsed then the lady ordered—A CUP OF COFFEE.

JUDGE SAMUEL ABBOTT of the Waltham District Court is a stickler for facts. He was trying a case recently of a boy charged with disturbance. One of the disturbing features, according to the prosecution, was the fact that the youthful defendant had thrown a baseball into the complainants property. The boy testified that the "baseball" was coverless. "Makes no difference whether it had a cover or not. It was a baseball," declared the lawyer examining the defendant. Judge Abbott stopped the examiner at this point and ruled that the "ball" was not a baseball. The lawyer began to argue, but his oration was stopped short. "Don't you begin to tell me what a baseball is or is not," snapped the judge. "I pitched for the best team Watertown ever produced years before you were born."

BOUCK WHITE, former pastor of the Church of Social Revolution, who called "marriage, laws mouldy," has moulded together in his laboratory south of Boston, a wonderful cement. This will heal, tighten, fix every leak in the world, so that when anything is broken, White declares, "Don't despair." White has acquired in his seclusion a reputation among local scientists. He has given up talking about marriages and all its difficulties, buried the past and with the intensity which marks his present work shows the world that he wants to mend everything that is broken, whether in affection or otherwise, and proves it, too.

On a blacksmith shop in Dorchester appeare three signs announcing the candidacy of three gentlemen for the office of district attorney —WILLIAM J. FOLEY, FRANCIS J. W. FORD and PETER J. DONOHUE. One above the other. Wonder who the owner of the building is going to vote for?

Lynn postoffice officials evidently believe a special delivery letter should be handled with all possible speed. Drop a special in the slot at the main office in the Shoe city and immediately an electric bell starts ringing and continues until one of the clerks takes the letter and starts it on the first leg of its destination.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON EARTH'S CURVATURE

By Garrett P. Serviss

"In a recent article you said that the earth rounds eight inches to the mile. Some years ago you told an inquirer that it curves with the square of the distance; that is, one mile is zero, two would be four, and three would be nine, and so on. Have I misunderstood you? I don't know much about figures, but I like to read what you say. —W. R. Peabody, Mass.

WHEN we say that the earth rounds off about eight inches to the mile, we mean that if, neglecting the effect of refraction, with which I shall deal later, we take a sight along a horizontal, or "level," line over a smooth surface like that of a lake or the ocean, then at the distance of one mile from the place of observation, our horizontal line of sight, or "tangent" line, will be elevated eight inches above the surface.

If now we should go forward a mile in any direction, and take another similar sight, the result would be the same, viz.: the new tangent line would be elevated eight inches at the distance of one mile from the new point of observation. This shows that the general curvature of the earth is everywhere about eight inches to the mile.

But suppose we had continued the first line straight on to a point two miles from the first point of observation, how high would it be above the surface? Not 16 inches, as you might perhaps suppose, but 32 inches. And if it were continued to a distance of three miles its height would become 72 inches, or six feet.

Why is this so? Because the circumference of the earth is very nearly a perfect circle, and if you draw a tangent line to a circle, i. e., a straight line just touching the circle at one point, the distance between the circle and the line as the latter is lengthened will be proportional to the square of the length of the line, starting from the tangent point. If the line becomes twice as long its departure from the circumference will be increased four times. You can satisfy yourself that this is approximately true by drawing a circle and a tangent to it and making the measurements.

The effect on refraction (which unfortunately is more or less variable, and occasionally quite eccentric) is to bend the line of sight downward when we are looking toward the horizon, so that the horizon and objects near it appear elevated above their real position. For instance, the sun at sunset is raised by refraction so that we see it apparently poised on the horizon when in reality it has sunk entirely below it.

In consequence of refraction it has been found that on the average the rounding off of the earth appears to amount to only about six inches per mile instead of the real amount, eight inches.

With Some Women Everything Dates Back to When She Lost Her Tonsils

Doctors all over the country are busy this Summer performing operations so that the women will have something to talk about this Winter.

Surgeons think that by cutting a woman's palate it will help her speech, but when they take out her appendix she never stops talking.

Most things date back to an earthquake, flood or fire, but when a woman has an operation everything dates back to the time she lost her tonsils.

Mrs. Jones met Mrs. Brown and they thought they didn't have anything in common until they discovered that they had both had their appendix removed.

Most women try to outdo one another and very few of them are satisfied with having their appendix taken out only once.

The way some club women talk about their operations you'd think they were giving an organ recital.

The average dame never cares what the doctor cuts out as long as it's not her vocabulary.

In society circles nothing less than an appendix removal is considered worth while.

A dame who has just had her appendix taken out couldn't be expected to talk to a woman who only had her adenoids removed.

An appendicular operation is very expensive, but look at the prestige it gives you.

It's better to spend a little more dough and get a cutting that is worth talking about.

One dame was on the operating table, and just before she went under the ether she made the doctor promise to cut on the bias.

This same doctor was operating on her head, and as he was ending an important, also promised her that he wouldn't cut the corners.

Most women talk about their operations just to pass away the evenings. But when they begin talking everybody feels like passing away.

It's a woman's own business if she wants an operation, but that's no reason she should take you through the operation stitch by stitch.

Very few dames ever have their tonsils they can't talk for two or three days after an operation.

An operation is a great thing. It gives a woman something to talk on, and she certainly does. She talks on and on and on.
